Recognition of Equal Rights Urged in the Message.

The President's Reply to a Delegation of Colored Men.

Wholesome Effect of the Indian Visits to the East.

Abstract of the Report of the Chief of Engineers.

Interesting Suggestions Regarding Harbor and Coast Defense.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—A delegation of colored gentlemen, representing the Pennsylvania Equal Rights League, today made a call upon the President, to urge him to give the subject of equal rights favorable consideration in his Message. William Nesbit, of Altoona, and Wm. D. Forten, Elector at large, headed the delegation, and presented its views in an address and a memorial. The President is reported to have replied that he sympathized fully with them in their desire to obtain the rights of citizens. That he knew they should have every right enjoyed by other citizens. He wished all voters in the United States to have equal rights. The time must come when it would be so. A ticket on a railroad or other conveyance should entitle them to all it does other men. Their earnest recommendation in regard to his Message, however, might properly belong to the next Administration. He said, emphatically, that all citizens should undoubtedly in all respects be equal. He thanked them for the compliment they had paid him.

THE HOSTILE SAVAGES COMING TO TERMS.

The wisdom of the Government in bringing to Washington and sending to the principal Eastern cities parties of wild and sometimes hostile Indians, is fully confirmed by the following facts, which we gather from official sources. The last large delegation which came East was composed mainly of Kiowas, Comanches, Apaches, and Arrapahoes from the Indian Territory, in charge of Capt. Henry E. Alvord, Special Indian Commissioner. They were in this City in October, and on their journey visited Baltimore, Philadelphia, New-York, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis. They have now reached their homes, and Capt. Alvord has returned and submitted his report. The Arrapahoe tribe, and the Caddoes, Witchitaws, and affiliated bands, fully sustain their delegations in their negotiations here regarding their lands, by which those tribes accede to the propositions of the Government for their locations upon considerably diminished reservations. The Kiowas, Comanches and Apaches had been informed of the substance of the recent address by the Commissioner to their delegates while in this city in advance of the return of the latter, and this in conjunction with Col. McKenzies timely attack upon the still implacable Comanches roaming in Texas, has borne its first fruits. The tribes named have promptly surrendered to their agent the last of the captives held by them, and declare their intention to give up the stolen animals in their herds, and otherwise fully comply with the demands of the Government. Already Maowi or "Shaking Hand," the most important of the disaffected Comanche Chiefs, with his band, and "Kicking Bird," with nearly all the Kiowas, have come again to their reservation and camped near their agency and Fort Sill. A few well-known Kiowa braves, with a small following, express their determination to continue to defy the authorities, but this was expected. The men have long been outlawed, and their own chiefs disclaim all responsibility for the deeds of such. All their agent tells the Government will be sustained by the tribe in any action it might take in regard to this faction.

THE LEGISLATIVE CHAMBERS.

The Senate Chamber is almost in readiness for the meeting of the Senate. The carpet has been put down, and the desks and chairs are being put in position. The old Senate desks and chairs are, many of them, over sixty years old. Capt Bassett, who has been for many years the door-keeper of the Senate, has kept a record, and can give a complete history of each chair and desk. The desks are of mahogany, and have been newly polished this Summer. The equivalent of the work of one man for six months has been done on the work, so that, instead of seeming sixty years old, they look as if newly manufactured. The House is also in readiness for the opening of the session.

CHANGES AND IMPROVEMENTS AT THE SMITHSONIAN.

Some changes are in progress in the Smithsonian Institution building, which, when completed, allow a new and much better arrangement of the National Museum than has been possible before. The room in the eastern end of the building is now being fitted with glass cases, made insect-proof and dust and air tight. An appropriation is also available for casing the large hall extending the whole length of the main building, and above the hall, now containing most of the objects in the museum. When the new casing is finished all the objects in the museum pertaining to ethnology will be placed in the great hall on the second floor. The ethnological collection now fills the whole of a small room on the first floor, entered from the east end of the main hall, half the cases in the galleries, and nearly or quite half the tables. The upper hall will contain one of the finest, if not the very finest, ethnological collection in the world. In the portion devoted to the American aborigines, it will be without a rival, and as complete and valuable as unique. The room first mentioned, which is now being cased, and the one between it and the main lower hall, will be occupied by the mineralogical and geological collection. The lower hall will be left for the Zoölogical Museum. This zoölogical collection is greatly crowded, and is rapidly growing. There is also a large collection of fossils, but it is not yet decided whether they shall be appropriately distributed among the other collections, or whether there shall be a department specially devoted to paleontology.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE MESSAGE.

The rough draft of the President's annual Message, though not quite finished, was read to the Cabinet today, all the members being present. It will be somewhat, perhaps one-fifth, longer than last year's Message. In addition to the two copies to be sent to Congress, five will be made in manifold for the use of the city Press and for telegraphing. In response to a question asked by the writer of this dispatch, the President remarked he had no objection to saying that the Message would not show a change of policy on his part, as his endeavor was now, as it had been in the past, to perform his entire duty to the extent of his ability, and in such a manner as would best serve the interests of the country. He was not certain that he would recommend to Congress an extension of amnesty to the two or three hundred persons excluded by recent legislation; but if he would, it would be with a proposed condition that the beneficiaries merely take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States. Congress, however, had ample authority in the premises, and could act with regard to the matter without a repetition of his views upon the subject contained in his former annual Message. He saw no more necessity, as had been asserted, for making a declaration of a more friendly policy toward the South than for such a declaration toward the North, as he sought as President, under the obligation of his oath, to execute the duties of his position without favor or partiality in accordance with law. He would in his Message indorse such recommendations of legislation as may be presented by the heads of the several Departments, and which experience had shown to be necessary. He would recommend to Congress that action be taken with regard to the award made by the Geneva arbitrators. The money will be paid by Great Britain to the Department of State, and be deposited in the Treasury. Of course, it cannot be drawn therefrom except, in accordance with law, for the purposes specified. In the course of conversation on the subject of civil service reform, the President said that while competitive examinations were desirable, he did not think it right that office should be given to enemies of the Administration to the exclusion of its friends. He was now engaged in examining applications for pardon, taking up the cases singly, with a view to conclusions upon them. He intended to pardon Col. Bowerman, who, about eighteen months ago, was convicted of embezzlement while he was an officer in the Baltimore Custom-house. He added that, in addition to other reasons, Col. Bowerman was a brave and faithful officer during the late war.

ACCURATE DISBURSEMENTS.

A remarkable instance of the correctness with which public money is disbursed by officers of the army is found in a recent letter of the Third Auditor of the Treasury to the Secretary of War, reporting the settlement of the accounts of Assistant Quartermaster-General Robert Allen, now Acting Quartermaster-General. These accounts extend over the period between April, 1861, and Aug. 31, 1865, during which time this officer has transferred and disbursed the enormous sum of $111,837,143, by far the largest amount transferred and disbursed by any officer of the Quartermaster's Department since the formation of the Government. The differences remaining, arising almost wholly from clerical errors, show that with all this vast expenditure there only remains unaccounted for the sum of $3,077. When it is remembered that the larger part of this expenditure occurred during the active operations of the immense armies in the field, with subordinates generally inexperienced, and with a large number of employes entirely unfamiliar with their duties, it is regarded as one of the most remarkable examples of the correctness and integrity of army officials, that there should be no allowances except for a few clerical errors in the disbursement of this great amount.

ECONOMY IN THE SIGNAL SERVICE.

With the view of diminishing the expenses of the Signal service, and, at the same time, possessing the power of suddenly increasing the number of stations from which reports are to be had in any section of the country which may at any season of the year be especially threatened by the storms which, at the different seasons, seem to pass more frequently over particular portions of the territories of the United States, the organization of a mobilized corps of observers has been commenced. This corps, which will consist of picked men, skillful and chosen for their special fitness for its contemplated duties, will be equipped with portable apparatus, comprising all the instruments they will be required to use at any station to which they may be suddenly ordered. The stations will be properly occupied in each section of the country in reference to the storms to which that section is habitually exposed at particular seasons, and will be designated in advance, and the proper telegraphic connections for those stations will be previously arranged. It will be possible to occupy in this way the stations with very great rapidity. The period of danger for which they may be occupied being passed, they will be abandoned, and the force left free to be transferred for the protection of other sections, whose season of danger may be then approaching.

DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST.

In consequence of the assignment of Gen. McDowell to the command of the Department of the South, the Department of the East embraced in the military division of the Atlantic, will be in charge of Gen. Hancock, there being at this time no Brigadier-General without a department under his command, excepting Gen. Howard, who is on special duty.

DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERS.

Report of the Chief of Engineers—Coast and Harbor Defenses.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The Chief of Engineers has submitted his report to the Secretary of War. The number of officers holding commissions in the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army at the end of the fiscal year was 103 on the active and 7 on the retired list, the latter, however, under the law of Jan. 21, 1870, not being available for duty.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

In the performance of the duties of the corps the employment of a number of scientists and civil assistants has been necessary. The report mentions the employment of Gen. J. H. Wilson, a member of the Board of Engineers, upon the improvement of the Des Moines Rapids and Rock Island Rapids, and the improvement of the Illinois River; and Clarence King, geologist in charge of the geological exploration of the fortieth parallel. Upon application, under the provisions of the act of June 10, 1872, a transfer to the Corps of Engineers was made of all the graduates of the Military Academy since March, 1869, that had been recommended by the President of the Academic Board for promotion in the Corps of Engineers.

COAST AND FRONTIER DEFENSES.

Upon the subject of sea-coast and frontier defenses the Chief of Engineers says the leading object of the Department in its operations upon the works of defense has been to push forward as speedily as possible the modification of the old earthen barbette batteries and the construction of new and improved batteries, more in accordance with the system of sea-coast defense adopted since the recent war. The principles of these have been stated in the reports for two or three years past. They have met with the approval of the General of the Army and the Executive; and the report states that only to be completed to give our harbors protection against even the most recently-constructed and powerful iron-clad vessels of the maritime Powers. Among the appliances for this defense it will be remembered are channel obstructions and a system of torpedoes; but these are accessories, and must themselves be covered by the fire of guns in a position that commands the channel. It becomes, then, of primary importance that the guns should be so mounted as to be as secure as it is practicable to make them from destruction by the enemy's fire delivered from iron-clad vessels of great strength and resistance. The most complete protection would inevitably be gained by placing the guns in a casemate in which security is furnished from projectiles coming from the front, the flanks and overhead; but as yet, within the limits of reasonable cost, we have not devised a structure of this character. By the use, however, of high sand parapets, behind which the gun when fired will descend, and by covering guns on either side with high traverses, a combination is obtained which is at once secure from direct and slightly-curved fire, whether from the front or flank, and substitutes sand, as a cheap material, for the costly iron shields and turrets. It is absolutely essential, however, that a carriage that shall lower the gun below the parapet be provided to secure these benefits; and accordingly the use of such a carriage was approved among the rules to govern the construction of our works of defense. Efforts to secure such a carriage have therefore been continued.

HARBOR DEFENSE.

The progress upon the defenses of our harbors during the past year have been in every respect satisfactory. Trials with torpedoes at the school at Willett's Point have progressed with a very marked success. The investigations have gone so far as to enable the Department to pronounce upon the special system, which it will, and arrange the details of the parts as well as the methods of handling and operating the torpedoes. The total cost of the application of this powerful auxiliary to the defenses of our coast will be about $2,000,000. An estimate is submitted of $500,000 for the torpedo defense of some of the most important harbors. The report is very voluminous, and sets forth in detail the progress made and anticipated upon the several works along the coast. Great attention is also given to improvements in river and harbor fortifications and inland defenses.

The Erie Canal Clear of Ice.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Boatmen report the Erie Canal entirely clear of ice.

The Liverpool and Rochester Towing Companies have withdrawn their horses from this city and have paid off a number of employes today. The cause of this is that all boats belonging to these lines have either gone east or west of this city.

Boats are now being loaded for various points along the canal, but the number in transit is not large.

Woman Suffrage in Indiana.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 26.—A large meeting of the leading citizens of all parties was held here this evening, for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Suffrage Association. A permanent organization was effected, with Major O. J. Smith, President; Judge Scott, Mrs. H. D. Scott, (wife of Senator Scott,) Mrs. B. Booth, (mother of the Governor of California,) Vice-Presidents. The movement is very strong here, and includes many of the best and most influential citizens.

THE FRENCH ASSEMBLY.

Excitement in Paris over the Political Dissensions.

Breach Between M. Thiers and the Conservatives Widening.

Conflicting Reports from the Committee on the Address—Reforms Tending to Republicanism Urged by the Minority —The Majority Press a Vote and are Defeated.

The Political Situation—No Settlement Between Thiers and the Assembly—Excitement in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 26—A. M.—There are no indications whatever this morning of a settlement of the differences betwen the Executive and Legislative Departments of the Government. Both President Thiers and the Committee on the Address in reply to his message, firmly adhere to their respective positions, and the situation is regarded by all as very serious.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—There is great excitement in this city and throughout the provinces over the aspect of affairs at Versailles. It is announced this morning that the members of the parties of the Right and Right Centre, in the National Assembly, have come to the determination to support the views of the Committee appointed to draft a reply to the message of M. Thiers, as embraced in its report.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Special dispatches from Paris to the London afternoon papers say the Radical Journals of the former city are violent in their language. They declare that a terrible revolution will follow the overthrow of the Government of M. Thiers. The same journals accuse the Legitimists, Orleanists, and Imperialists of having formed a coalition to work for the downfall of the present Government. Gen. Changarnier is also charged with aiming to secure power.

Minority Report of the Committee on the Address—Constitutional Reforms to Secure Republican Government—Reception—Sentiment of Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The minority of the Committee on the Address, who disagree from the report made by the majority, have adopted a resolution to propose to the Assembly the nomination of a committee of thirty-five members of that body, with instructions to present a bill establishing ministerial responsibility, and embodying the constitutional reforms necessary to secure the regular working of a republican Government. The resolution has been submitted to Mr. Thiers, and he expresses his entire approval of it.

A reception, which was largely attended, was given at the Executive mansion last night. Marshal McMahon was present, and the greeting between that officer and M. Thiers was marked by the utmost cordiality.

Gen. L'Amirault, the Military Governor of Paris, who was present, said, during a conversation, that the City of Paris supported the President in the present contest with the parties of the Assembly.

The Reports in the Assembly—A Motion to Postpone the Majority Report Carried.

PARIS, Nov. 26—Evening.—The majority report of the Committee on the Address was read in the Assembly this afternoon. It is a strong indictment against the Radical Party, and insists on the establishment of a responsible ministry as a means of fighting Radicalism.

The majority of the Committee asked for the immediate consideration of the report.

The minority moved that it be postponed until Thursday.

The motion to postpone was carried by a vote of 356 yeas to 332 nays.

The result is regarded as a very favorable indication for the Government. The President's supporters in the Assembly believe this vote virtually ends the crisis, and that a similar majority is sure for the Government next Thursday.

THIERS' MESSAGE.

Republican France—The Executive's View of the Situation.

The following summary of M. Thiers' message, read at Versailles on Nov. 13, appears in the London papers:

At the opening of the sitting of the Assembly, M. Thiers read from the tribune his inaugural message. He commenced by stating that perfect calm had prevailed in the country during the Parliamentary vacation, and that progress had been made in the work of reparation and general prosperity, for which thanks were due to God, the sovereign author of all things, who helps and sustains nations in misfortune that have not despaired of Him or of themselves. Relative to the loan, M. Thiers said that the whole available capital of the commercial world had been offered to France. The Government had received in instalments 1,750,000,000 francs, thus half the loan had been realized in three months. The Government commenced operations with 1,400,000,000 to 1,500,000,000 francs in bills of all countries on Germany; Prussia had already received 800,000,000 francs, and would receive 200,000,000 francs more in December. The Government will have 600,000,000 francs remaining in bills toward next year's payments. Speaking of the position of the Bank of France, M. Thiers said the Bank has 800,000,000 francs in gold and silver in hand, 44,000,000 francs of bar gold on deposit, and 50,000,000 francs in gold and silver belonging to the State. The French imports for the present year, nine months of which are already known, will be 3 milliards 457 millions of francs, and the exports 3 milliards 557 millions. The Government estimates the total deficit for the close of the year at about 132,000,000 francs. A financial equilibrium will be fully attained at the end of 1873, and the Government feels certain of a considerable surplus in 1874. M. Thiers proceeded to give details relative to the Anglo-French Treaty of Commerce. He said: "We have promised England, and she has promised us, to treat each other on the footing of the most favored nation. The same principle will in the future regulate our relations with Great Britain. We shall do what we consider advisable for the protection of our industry, but we shall not treat English products differently from the products of other nations. England will act in the same manner toward us. But as we were bound toward several countries by numerous engagements which it was impossible to break without a previous agreement, we have postponed the complete application of the principle we have adopted until the 31st of December, 1876, the period when our engagements, and especially those by which we are bound toward Austria, will expire. Until then, if our fiscal taxes or our treaties should cause temporarily a differential system toward England, England would await, on the 31st December, 1876, the system of equality which we have promised to concede to her. Thus the conditions stipulated with Great Britain are for the benefit of our coast. The liquidation of our fiscal taxes and the provisional maintenance of the existing system as regards French products in England, and English products in France; for the future, reciprocal treatment on the basis of the most favored nation, on the day when the equal system shall become possible." Passing in review the above satisfactory result of the efforts of the Government to repair the national disasters, M. Thiers said France owed this result to the maintenance of order. He continued as follows: "I shall not cease, gentlemen, to repeat that if you had not been in full possession of order, this war, unequaled in reverses—this cruel dismemberment of our territory—these frightful burdens which appeared beyond our strength, a throne fallen under the weight of its errors, an antique form of monarchy, under which we had been accustomed to live, suddenly disappearing, and this new form of the republic, which generally disquiets the public mind as soon as it appears—all this bursting suddenly upon our surprised and disheartened country, might have become an irreparable disaster. I would say to those who for a long time past have placed their faith in a republic as their ideal of a government most conformable to their views, and most appropriate to the progress of modern society, I would say to them, 'You, above all, should passionately wish for order; for if the republic, already twice tried without success, can succeed this time, it will be to order that you will owe the fact. Make this, therefore, your task, your everyday solicitude. If the exercise of certain rights which belong to a free people might render the country uneasy, learn to renounce them for the moment. Make for public security a sacrifice which will especially redound to the profit of the Republic.' If it were possible to say that order has not an equal interest for all, I should presume to affirm that it has an essential interest for you, and that when we labor to maintain it we labor for you almost more than for ourselves. Events have given us the Republic, and to go back to its causes in order to discuss and judge them would be today an enterprise as dangerous as it would be useless. The Republic exists. It is the legal Government of the country. To wish for anything different would be to wish for a fresh revolution, and one more formidable than all. Do not let us lose our time in proclaiming the Republic, but let us employ it in impressing upon this Republic those features which are desirable and necessary. A commission appointed by you a few months ago gave it the title of Conservative Republic. Let us take possession of this title, and especially let us endeavor to make it deserved." M. Thiers continued, insisting upon the necessity for every Government to be Conservative. "The Republic must be Conservative, or cannot exist. France cannot live in continuous alarms. She has absolute need of repose, and will not long endure any Government which does not afford her this repose. The Republic of a party would only be a thing of a day. The mass might live upon agitation for a few days, but after inspiring fear in others, it becomes afraid of itself, and throws itself into the arms of an adventurer, thus paying for a few days of disastrous license with twenty years of slavery; and this it has frequently done, as you know. Do not believe that it is not capable of doing it again. It will recommence a hundred times this sad and humiliating journey from anarchy to despotism, and despotism to anarchy—a path strewn with shame and calamity. Let us break this fatal chain, let us tranquilize instead of exciting. Let us make the necessary sacrifices for the general security—sacrifices that may seem even excessive; especially let us not afford the aspect of the reign of a party, for a republic is but a contradiction if, instead of being the government of all, it be but the government of any single party whatever. If, for example, we seek to represent it as the triumph of one class over another, we drive from it a part of the country—a part first, and then the whole." Alluding to the Revolution of 1789, M. Thiers observed: "Its material works have perished, but its moral works still live, and constitute the most solid glory of France, much more than victories which, according to the hazard of force, pass from one flag to another. As to myself, I do not understand, I do not admit a Republic, but by taking it as it ought to be, namely, as the government of a nation which, having for a long time and in good faith attempted to leave to hereditary power the direction and distribution of its destinies, but having failed therein through faults which it is now impossible to judge, makes up its mind at last to regulate its affairs itself and alone, by means of elect, freely and wisely chosen, without exclusion of party or class, or origins, seeking them neither high nor low, neither to the right nor the left, but in the full light of public esteem. Two years passed in almost complete calm may afford us hope of founding this conservative republic, but hope only—let that not be forgotten. The slightest mistake would suffice to make this hope vanish in a disheartening reality." M. Thiers proceeded to say that the Republic inspired not only France, but the whole world, with confidence. "Foreign Governments are now sufficiently enlightened to see in France France alone. If she is orderly she will suit everybody; if she is not only orderly, but strong, she will suit those who desire a just equilibrium between the powers of the universe. Therefore I presume to affirm that the efforts which France has made during nearly two years have earned for her an esteem, of which she has already received numerous proofs. I make this declaration because I have, as in duty bound, my eyes unceasingly fixed upon Europe. France is not isolated, and it depends upon herself whether she shall be, on the contrary, surrounded by trusting and useful friends. If she is peaceful under a Republic, she will alleviate no one; if she is agitated under a tottering Monarchy, she will see a void created around her." M. Thiers concluded by saying: "We draw near, gentlemen, to a decisive moment. The form of this Republic has been only an incidental form, given by events, and reposing upon your wisdom and your union with the Power which you have temporarily chosen. But the public mind is awaiting your action. All are asking what day and what form you will select in order to give to the Republic that conservative strength with which she cannot dispense. It is for you to choose both the day and the form. The country, in relegating to you its powers, has evidently laid upon you the task of saving it by procuring for it, first, peace; after peace, order; and, with order, the restoration of its power; and, lastly, a regular Government. You proclaimed this, and thenceforth it was for you to fix the succession and the hour of these diverse portions of the work of salvation which is confided to you. God preserve us from placing ourselves in your place; but at the time that you may determine, and when you have chosen some from among you to meditate upon this capital work, if you desire our opinion we will give it frankly and resolutely. This is the grand and decisive season which opens before you. Neither deference nor co-operation, neither devotion nor resolution shall be wanting on our part to insure the success of your task. May God bless it, and render it complete and especially durable, a consummation which has not yet been granted since the commencement of the century."

THE IMPRESSION.

During the reading of the message by M. Thiers the Right and Right Centre gave no applause, except at the passage where M. Thiers stated that the satisfactory position of the country was due to the maintenance of order. When M. Thiers said every Government must be conservative, the Left were the first to applaud, and the Right remained silent. At every mention of the word "Republic"—and particularly at the passage where M. Thiers said, "the Republic exists"—there were cries on the Right of "The Bordeaux Pact!" and "We don't want the Republic!" The passages relative to the satisfactory financial and commercial state of the country were warmly applauded by the Left and Left Centre. M. Gambetta exclaimed, "Very Good!" when M. Thiers eulogized the moral result of the Revolution of 1789. At the conclusion of the message the Left Centre gave three enthusiastic rounds of applause. The Right and Right Centre remained silent.

He said troops had been sent to Andalusia, where roving bands were committing depredations, and others would soon follow. There had been disturbances in Velez-Malaga, but they were soon suppressed. Murcia had been declared in a state of siege and placed under martial law. In the City of Santander a riot occurred, yesterday, which was suppressed by the National Guard. Four of the rioters were arrested. There had also been slight disturbances at Gijon, in the province of Oviedo. There were indications of disorder in Almeria, and troops were being concentrated at different points in that province. Señor Zorilla said but little importance was attached by the Government to these demonstrations.

LOUISIANA.

Further Evidence of Warmoth's Election Frauds.

Untrustworthy Character of the New-Orleans News Dispatches.

United States Treasury Agents After Warmoth—His Performances when Cotton Agent—He is to be Prosecuted for Embezzlement.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEW-ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—At the opening of the United States Circuit Court, this morning, in the case of Kellogg vs. Warmoth et al., counsel for complainant offered in evidence 6,000 affidavits of colored Republicans from ten parishes in this State, who offered their votes to the Warmoth Commissioners of Election and were refused. These were the affidavits of legal voters. Judge Durrell admitted them. Notice was given by counsel that 8,000 similar affidavits of legal voters in other parishes of the State, which were also refused by Warmoth's appointees, would be offered in evidence in the case. These latter are now being forwarded to Mr. Wolfley, United States General Supervisor of Elections.

The dispatch sent on the 21st inst. from here by the Associated Press agent, (an ex-Confederate officer, who is said to be in the pay of Gov. Warmoth, and who, at all events, sides with that faction,) to the effect that the Supreme Court of this State recognized the validity of the Governor's commission to the candidates, referred to in my former dispatch, is false. The Supreme Court on Saturday last distinctly refused to recognize the validity of any of these commissions, on the motion made to recognize Mr. H. N. Ogden, the fusion candidate for Attorney-General.

Special Agent Cobb has arrived here, on his way to Texas, with instructions to prosecute Gov. Warmoth for the embezzlement of United States funds when special cotton agent in Texas in 1867. From investigations in the Treasury Department, it was discovered that the Governor, when he made his report of his official action, transmitted only a small moiety of the cotton tax collected by him from several large firms in Galveston. This discovery was made on application of these firms for a refunding of this tax, under the act of Congress and Treasury regulations recently promulgated. The extent of the Governor's embezzlement is said to be very large. The proof consists mainly of documentary evidence, and is alleged to be perfectly conclusive. Much to Warmoth's chagrin, the statute of limitations in his case did not commence to run until 1870, in Texas, owing to a special provision of the act of Congress readmitting that State into the Union. A warrant for the Governor's arrest will soon be here from Texas.

THE STATE ELECTION.

Official Vote for the Entire State Ticket.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The official returns of the late elections from all the counties of the State, except New-York and Kings Counties, are on file in the Secretary of State's office. Taking the figures for those two counties as published in the New-York papers, the vote stands as follows:

Fire in Sandusky, Ohio—Loss $100,000.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 26.—A fire broke out about midnight, last night, at Sandusky, in the engine-room of the Sandusky Wheel Company's Works, and spread with such rapidity that in two hours all of the Company's shops, finished stock and machinery, and nine dwellings and a barn on the South side, were in ashes. The Wheel Company saved their warehouse and rough stock. Their loss is estimated at about $100 000, on which there is an insurance of about $40,000. The loss on the dwellings burned will probably be from $15,000 to $20,000, and the insurance is $5,000. Two hundred and fifty men are deprived of employment by the destruction of the Wheel-works.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 26.—The insurance on the property burned last night at Sandusky amounts to $58 300, distributed as follows: Underwriters', $10,000; St. Paul's, $5,000; Franklin, of Wheeling, $5,000; Lycoming, $5,000; Amazon, $7,000; North Missouri, $5,000; Alemania, of Cleveland, $3,000; Connecticut, of Hartford, $2,000; National, of Bangor, $2,500; Brewers', of Milwaukee, $2,500; Howard, of New York, $2,000; Fireman's, of Dayton, $2,000; Westchester, of New-York, $2,000; Royal, $800; Home, of New-York, $800; Sun, of Cleveland, $700; Farmers', Merchants', and Manufacturers,' of Hamilton, Ohio, $2,000, and the Insurance Company of North America, $2,000. The insurance, to the amount of $30,000, was on the Wheel Company's Works, and the remainder on dwellings.

THE DIAMOND-FIELDS.

Exposure of a Gigantic Swindle—Report of Geological Experts—The Ground "Salted"—Dissolution of the Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—A meeting of the directors of the San Francisco and New-York Commercial and Mining Company was held yesterday afternoon, to receive reports from the geological survey sent out under Clarence King, and consisting of Mr. King, D. D. Colton, Surveyor Post, and Mr. Frey. Voluminous reports from the survey were received, denouncing the whole pretended discovery as a gigantic fraud. The trustees at once adopted a resolution to the effect that the fraud be at once and fully exposed, in order that the public may be protected; also, that no more stock be issued or transferred, and that the corporation be dissolved as soon as practicable. The public are warned against any further transactions on the faith of the alleged discoveries. All the stock thus far sold is still held by W. C. Rals ton, an banker of California, and the original incorporators will assume the entire loss from the operations of the Company.

The report of Clarence King gives the operations of his surveys in detail. In the vicinity of Table Rock, diamonds and rubies were found on the surface and in the crevices, but in every instance of a "find" there was evidence that the soil had been tampered with. In crevices where there were no traces of the work of men, no evidence of the existence of precious stones was discovered. Some diamonds were found in what were evidently artificial holes. The conclusion arrived at by Mr. King is that the gems found were in positions where they would have been deposited by the hand of man, and that none exist where, if their occurrence had been genuine, the inevitable laws of nature would have placed them. Finally, he asserts that the reputed diamond-fields have been "salted" or scattered over with stones, for the purpose of deceiving chance or unskilled searchers. The reports of the other explorers corroborate that Mr. King.

The Bulletin, some time since, published a partial exposé of the operations of Arnold, the man who sold the original "discovery" to the Harpending Company for $150,000. It is said that the directors, at the time of this publication, became satisfied of the fraud, but obtained the reports mentioned to satisfy any doubts upon the subject, and to detect, if possible, the originators of the swindle. With this view the stock has been held back, until the genuineness of the reports from all quarters could be tested.

THE ENDOWMENT OF INDIAN RIDES.

The case of William M. Tweed, who is jointly charged with A. Oakey Hall and Richard B. Connolly, in connection with the frauds in the Erie Railway matter, came up again yesterday in the Court of Over and Terminer, before Judge Brady. The prosecution was conducted by District-Attorney Garvin, Assistant District-Attorney Fullerton, and Messrs. Graham and Peckham. The defendant was represented by Messrs. D. Field, J. Graham, Fullerton, and Bartlett. Mr. Fullerton opened the motion, which was substantially based upon the ground that the indictment was defective in not containing a statement of the time when the offense was committed. Mr. Fullerton explained that the object of the motion was to secure a bill of particulars from the District-Attorney, so that the defendant might be prepared to meet the charges against him. Mr. Garvin opposed the motion, which was argued at length by Messrs. Graham and Peckham in favor of the motion, and by Messrs. Fullerton and Bartlett against it. Judge Brady reserved his decision.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—IN BANKRUPTCY.

DECISION.

In the case of Nathaniel Dale, bankrupt, in which a motion was made for an order vacating a suspension of proceedings upon an order and summons heretofore granted by the Register, Judge Blatchford denied the motion, but allowed the Register to issue a new order for the examination of the bankrupt.

By Judge Blatchford.

SUIT TO SET ASIDE A MORTGAGE.

In the case of James H. Moran, assignee in bankruptcy of the Columbian Metal Works, vs. David Strauss, Francesco Bianchi, and Robert Thompson, Judge Blatchford, in the United States District Court, yesterday, rendered a decision. This action was brought to set aside a mortgage given by the Columbian Metal Works to the defendants, constituting the firm of Strauss & Co, of this City, on the ground that the mortgage was obtained by fraud and collusion. Judge Blatchford's decision arrives at the following conclusions:

1. The petition, in bankruptcy having been filed March 19, 1869, the title of the assignee relates back to that date, and the decree of foreclosure made on the 26th of March, 1868, in a suit to which he was not a party, is of no effect to prejudice his rights. 2. If the mortgage was unauthorized and void, as being ultra vires, it was such a fraud on the general creditors of the corporation that the plaintiff can not benefit by it. The holders of two-thirds of the stock consented to the mortgage. The seventy-five disputed shares belonged to Pirsson, as surviving trustee. They had been originally issued as full-paid stock, and passed from the parties to whom they were issued, and into the hands of Pirsson and Freeman, as trustees, as working capital, for the benefit of the stockholders, to be disposed of under the direction of the Board of Trustees in such manner as they should deem for the best interests of the Company. Freeman had died. A sale of the seventy-five shares on credit to H. O. Freeman was a lawful sale. It was approved by the Board. Even if the seventy-five shares could not be represented by H. O. Freeman, the consent of Pirsson and of the other four members of the Board of Trustees was given to the mortgage, and as the seventy-five shares, as represented by Pirsson or by the individuals composing the Board, must be counted among the consenting shares. 4. The defendants, at the time the mortgage was given, owned only twenty-eight shares, not enough to make the two-thirds if the seventy-five shares be excluded. 5. The consideration of the mortgage, so far as appears, was advanced by the defendants in good faith, and went to the uses of the corporation. 6. The mortgage is not impeached as being in violation of the Bankruptcy act. 7. Construing the consent as applying only to a mortgage of the real estate, no consent was necessary to enable the corporation to mortgage the personal property, or to assign the patents. The mortgage did not cover the patents. They were assigned by a separate instrument, and even though it be to be said that they were really assigned only as security, yet the corporation had power by law to convey its personal property, which power includes the power to mortgage or to transfer as security. A mortgage is none the less a conveyance because it is defeasible. The greater includes the less, unless the less is expressly excluded. 8. The suit to set aside the mortgage wholly cannot be maintained, but it must be regarded as, together with the letters patent assigned, a security for such moneys if any, as the corporation owed the defendants when the mortgage was given, and such moneys as the defendants paid for, or advanced to the Corporation on the faith of the mortgaged property and the patents. If it be doubtful whether such moneys, with interest, exceed the proceeds of the mortgaged property and the patents, the amount due to the defendants must be ascertained on proof.

W. H. Ameux for the plaintiff; J. M. Van Cott for the defendants.

DECISIONS.

COURT OF APPEALS.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 224.—Home Insurance Company vs. Huchberger et al.—Error to the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois.—This was an action on a policy of insurance. There was no question of law involved, but only of fact, whether or not the insured had complied with the conditions of the policy in-sued in their stock of goods in Chicago, burned in March, 1867. It was also claimed that no notice of the loss was given within the terms of the policy. The Court below gave the questions to the jury, and the verdict was for the insured. The plaintiffs in error insist that the Court erred in its instructions to the jury upon these points, and in refusing to give certain instructions asked. They do not, however, file any arguments. The defendants in error file a brief setting forth the charge of the Court, and rest their case upon that.

Lyman Trumbull for defendants in error.

No. 76.—Pipes, Guardian, &c., vs. Wittenbarger.—Appeal from the Circuit Court for the District of Louisiana.—The appellant brought a bill to restrain, by injunction, the appelee from proceeding with an order of sale that the latter had obtained in the Court in which this bill was filed, against certain lands in the possession of an administrator of the state. The question presented was whether the claim of the appellee, being founded upon certain promissory notes, was not barred by the statute of limitations. The Court found that, deducting the time of the war, the time fixed by the statute had not expired, and the decree was in his favor. The case was submitted, but the appellant does not appear, and the appellee insists that the appeal was taken merely for delay, and that, under the rule of the Court in such cases, damages should be allowed.

T. J. Durant for appellee.

No. 78.—Williams vs. Baker.—Appeal from the Circuit Court for the District of Iowa.—This was an action by the appellee to recover certain lands in Iowa, to which his claims were resisted at the time of the act of May, 1855, making a grant of lands to that state to aid in the construction of certain railroads. The appellee derived his title from one of the railroad companies, which took title from the State, and the appellant derives his title from the Government. The question is, whether the lands in question were within the reservation, and whether the patent of the Government to the appellee, in the appellee. The decree below found in his favor, but it is here maintained that the grant did not extend to the region of country where his lands are located.

J. Cook for appellant; T. F. Withrow for appellee.

DECISIONS.

No. 237.—Leary vs. United States.—Appeal from the Court of Claims.—The claimants' vessel was chartered to the Government for service at Port Royal in 1864. While there she was ordered out of port in bad weather against the discretion of the owner, and was lost by reason of a collision with an old anchor sunk in the harbor. By the charter, the Government was to take the war risk and the owners to take the marine risk; and the claim for the value of the vessel is based upon the theory that the Government became the constructive owner of the vessel, and that the risk was of such an extraordinary character, being ordered by the officers of the Government, and taken under compulsion; that it was taken out of the class assumed by the owner, and became a risk of the Government. The Court below found for the Government, and that judgment is here affirmed, the Court saying that the possession and control of the vessel had not passed to the charterer, under the decisions in similar cases, but had been retained by the general owner; and that as the risk was a possible collision with a sunken anchor in the harbor, it was an ordinary risk which every vessel must run which enters a harbor, and one which every marine policy covers.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion.

No. 230.—Rees vs. Gould.—Error to the Circuit Court for the Western District of Pensayivania.—This was an action brought by the defendant here to recover for an alleged infringement of a patent for improvement in steam engines. The Court below ruled that the combination of mechanical devices used by Rees was so similar to that covered by the Gould patent that the plaintiff could recover. The reverse was claimed here, and the Court sustained the theory, saying that a new patentable inventions may consist entirely in a new combination of ingredients whereby a new and useful result is obtained, and that in such cases the description of the invention is sufficient if the ingredients are named, their mode of operation given, and the result obtained pointed out, so that those skilled in the arts and the public may know the nature and extent of the improvement, and what the facts are which operate to produce the described result.

Mr. Justice Clifford delivered the opinion.

No. 152.—Kearney et al vs. Drun et al.—Error to the Circuit Court for the District of Maryland.—This was an action of ejectment, in which the questions were of a technical character, as to the condition of the parties to the action, &c. The Court below held that the condition of parties was such as to give jurisdiction, and proceeded to judgment, which is here affirmed.

Mr. Justice Swayne delivered the opinion.

Nos.—Grinchs et al. vs. Hill et al.—Appeal from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.—This was a contest to obtain certain funds in the hands of one Weatmore, held for the benefit of James Hamilton, whose claim was founded on services rendered to the Old Bank of the United States for services in procuring certain legislation by Congress. The claimants were assignees of Hamilton, and the Court below found in their favor. The appeal alleged that neither Hamilton's claim nor those under him were valid, as they were all founded upon the consideration of his services to the bank, which were illegal. This Court submits the view of the appellants, and order the decree reversed, unless the allowance made below is remitted here. In that case the decree may be affirmed.

Mr. Justice Swayne delivered the opinion.

No. 228.—New-Bedford and New-York Steam Propeller Company vs. the United States.—Appeal from the Court of Claims.—This was an action for the loss of the steamer Thorn, chartered to the Government for a certain time, at a certain price, with a clause providing that, if the vessel remained in the service so long, after deducting the actual cost of running and repair, a yearly sum per cent profit on the appraised value, ($40,000,) that the money paid on the charter should be equal in value to the estimated value of the vessel, then the steamer should become the property of the United States without further payment, except arrears for use. The vessel being lost before the money paid had reached such a sum, the claim was for her appraised value. The Court below held that it was only the balance due, under the agreement, on the price of the vessel, and not the appraised value, that could be recovered. The appeal claimed that unless the earnings amounted to $40,000, there was no option to purchase, and the Government was not, therefore, entitled under the clause. This Court hold that the contract looked to the purchase of the vessel, as claimed by the Government, and affirmed the judgment below.

Mr. Justice Strong delivered the opinion.

The Chief-Justice announced that the Court would, on Tuesday, 26th inst., adjourn for the term. The next regular term will begin on the following Monday.

TUESDAY, Nov. 26—P. M.

The North-west Stock corner in Wall-street is at an end. It was not broken by the recusant Bears, like Henry N. Smith, but on a general settlement of differences at rates, ranging today from 140 to 125 ₱ cent. The last settlement on the part of Mr. Drew is said to have been at 125 ₱ cent. The amount recovered or promised from Mr. Smith is a matter of private arrangement, about which nothing was publicly known up to 3 o'clock, beyond the statement that Smith had come down from high, technical, and legal grounds, and, by a general settlement, acknowledged the corner as a fixed and stubborn fact. It is not believed that the other party were able to squeeze out of Smith, by compromise, anything like their pretensions of Saturday and Monday.

As soon as these settlements were known on the Exchange, North-west Stock fell to 100@90@85 ₱ cent., and the affair also affected, more or less, the general speculation, which had shown great firmness early in the day. But before 4 o'clock the reaction in prices had been overcome, especially on Lake Shore, New-York Central and Western Telegraph. The firmness of yesterday and this morning is ascribed on the Street, in good part, to something in the nature of a bearish scare, resulting from the sudden and terrible punishment on the North-west corner. If this theory be correct, it develops a pretty large and extensive short interest, in town and country, in nearly all the Road Stocks, and in Telegraph and Pacific Mail. Whether entirely correct or not, there was an unusual rush at the Exchange Board last night and this morning to buy Stocks, which was only partially abated after the settlements in the North-west. The closing prices at 4 o'clock compare as below with the last quotations of yesterday.

As touching the use of the name of the Vanderbilt people in connection with the North-west corner and the alliance of Clark and Schell with Jay Gould, we heard yesterday that Commodore Vanderbilt and his son, Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, felt greatly annoyed and scandalized by this association, and that other colleagues of Clark and Schell in the New-York Central were also indignant at the false position in which this great interest had been placed by the Wall-Street affair. That our information was not out of the way is evident from the following characteristic card from the old Commodore in the Afternoon papers. No one can envy the feelings of Mr. Horace F. Clark and Mr. Augustus Schell on re

As if people had not had enough, and more than enough, of the old-woman stories which attribute all sorts of desperate schemes to the President, the Tribune has now begun to sound the alarm, because it pretends to have discovered that the President is intent upon seeking a re-election in 1876. Any one would have supposed that the Tribune was sick of Presidential elections for one year, and was not in the humor to discuss that which is to take place four years hence. There is probably not one rational man in the whole country who wants to hear any more at present about elections. Gen. GRANT appears to be intent upon the discharge of his ordinary duties, and we may be quite sure he is not bothering his head about what will happen in 1876. The Tribune will do well to hold its tongue about elections, and stick to its programme of "cultivating the arts and sciences." Above all, let it refrain from inventing fresh calumnies about public men, at the very time that it is seeking to divert just and honest criticism from its editor.

Experience seems to prove that private enterprise and resources are hindered rather than helped by public aid, in repairing such disasters as the Boston fire. The letter of Mayor Medill, of Chicago, clearly shows that the rebuilding of that city has been in no way delayed by the refusal to mortgage the city credit for the advantage of those who had buildings destroyed, and that little benefit was derived from the remission of duties by Congress on building materials. The arguments against the issuing of city building bonds in aid of individuals, presented by Mr. Medill, seem conclusive, and Boston will lose nothing by taking them into candid consideration before reaching a decision on this point. When the end desired can be gained without adding to public burdens, or creating new temptations to fraud in the management of public resources, no reason exists for doing either. Public opinion in Boston appears to be tending in this direction, and we do not doubt that in the end the admirable pluck displayed by the merchants and real estate owners who were losers by the fire, will be depended on to repair its damages, and that it will be found fully equal to the task.

Six thousand affidavits of colored Republicans in Louisiana, whose votes were refused at the late election by the Warmoth officials, were received in the United States Circuit Court, at New-Orleans, yesterday, and notice was given that eight thousand more were almost ready for presentation. The truth as to the outrageous frauds perpetrated by WARMOTH is slowly appearing, and enough is already known to show that he has never had an equal in bold and unmitigated rascality. It is now alleged that he was guilty of embezzlement when Special Agent of the Treasury Department, and we learn that a warrant has been issued for his arrest upon this charge.

By taking warning from its predecessor, the new Board of Aldermen can avoid a grave mistake. Alderman VANCE was chosen temporary Chairman; but instead of making him President, the Board took JOHN COCHRANE, and thus saddled themselves with a reproach which has ever since rested upon them. The people have made sure that this blunder shall not be repeated, by re-electing Alderman VANCE, and dropping JOHN COCHRANE out of official life. If the new Board desire to make a manifestly unfit man President, search must be made for new material. COCHRANE, happily for the public interests, is not available.

Public documents rarely repay perusal so well as will the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, which we publish this morning. It is statistical only to the extent that it informs us that, exclusive of those in Alaska, there are three hundred thousand Indians within the limits of the United States, of which number ninety-seven thousand are civilized, one hundred and twenty-five thousand semi-civilized, and seventy-eight thousand wholly uncivilized—according to our ideas of civilization. The report is chiefly devoted to a general review of the Indian policy of the Government, and, although passages could be selected which would seem open to the reproach of not reasoning in its favor, it is, in its full context, an exhaustive defense of the changes which President GRANT has made in the dealings of the Government with the tribes. The continued employment of the military is stated to be necessary for the repression of the hostile tribes, and it is urged that as they cease to be formidable, the Government should extend over them a rigid reformatory discipline, to prevent them from falling into pauperism and crime. These views, with nearly all the others set forth in the report, seem to us to be based upon the common sense which the President has insisted should be brought to the management of our Indian affairs.

As a physiognomist, Commodore VANDERBILT must be regarded as a success. In his "card," which will be found in our columns this morning, he says of Mr. JAY GOULD:

"Since then (1868) I have had nothing to do with him, in any way whatever, nor do I mean ever to have, unless it be to defend myself. I have, besides, always advised all my friends to have nothing to do with him in any business transaction. I came to this conclusion after taking particular notice of his countenance."

A very important improvement in the signal service is contemplated, in the organization of a mobile corps for observation at points which, from time to time, may be of special interest. In this way, the service, which is already a source of just pride to our people, will be made still more useful.

M. THIERS, yesterday, vindicated his reputation as a lucky politician. On a very full vote, he succeeded in gaining a postponement of the consideration of the adverse report on his message by a bare majority. It is announced that the "crisis" is regarded as at an end for the present.

Another murder case has had a bitterly farcical conclusion. EMIL ANDRE, having deliberately shot his wife, was put upon trial, and the plea of insanity was made in his behalf. The facts showed clearly that the accused, if sane, and guilty of any offense, was guilty of the highest grade of homicide, but the jury yesterday brought in a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree. Our juries in criminal cases seem determined to make the system too ridiculous to be patiently endured.

Historian and Monk.

Mr. FROUDE'S visit to this country will probably be valuable to him, both as a philosopher and an historian, but we fear that it cannot be regarded entirely as a visit of pleasure. The plans which he had formed in his study are not found practicable when they are applied to common life—an experience which Mr. FROUDE shares with many other scholars, whose theories concerning the forces which control public opinion, and the power of arguments to remove prejudices, would be admirable if they in the least degree corresponded with the facts. We have no doubt that any shrewd man of Mr. FROUDE'S acquaintance in this country could have forewarned him of all the inconveniences he has sustained, and is still doomed to encounter, in an enterprise which is so fanciful and visionary that it rather suggests the dreams of a wandering knight-errant than the sober projects of a man of great talents, living in a somewhat skeptical and prosaic age. Mr. FROUDE could scarcely hope to convert the Irish to his opinions, and nobody else wanted to be converted. He touched a subject which, even across the Atlantic, is better left alone. One of the misfortunes of Ireland is that you cannot even discuss her past, present, or future without stirring up bitter animosities, rekindling old feuds, and rendering a practical solution of her difficulties more hopeless than ever. Mr. GLADSTONE—perhaps the most unwise man ever placed at the head of a great government—undertook to redress Irish grievances by abolishing a church which had been loyal to the Crown. Have we heard less of Irish grievances since Mr. GLADSTONE'S "great healing measure"? Have we not rather heard more of them than ever? Mr. GLADSTONE only made those discontented who were contented before, without in the faintest degree diminishing the old burden of discontent.

There is no man living who can do away with Irish discontent, unless English rule in Ireland is entirely relinquished; and when Mr. FROUDE started by admitting that this was impossible, he gave an excellent reason why he should have refrained from jumping into the Hibernian hornet's nest. His intentions were excellent, but he is not a man of the world; he cannot be what people call a hard-headed, practical man, or he would never have come to America to lecture on Ireland. It was not for us to offer him advice when he first arrived, nor would Mr. FROUDE have taken it if we had offered it; but we never had a doubt about the tribulations which awaited him, and we have watched them gathering round about him with mingled feelings of curiosity and sympathy. We do not wish to disquiet him, but we must say that we are satisfied he has not yet seen the worst of his troubles. So far he has had to face only a monk, whose notions of history are about equal to those which most monks possess. Modern history from a Catholic stand-point is generally totally original, and Father BURKE'S authorities for historical facts seem to be chiefly derived from his own luxuriant imagination. When he tells us, for instance, that the Catholics had nothing whatever to do with the massacre of St. Bartholomew, we can only marvel at the stupendous mendacity of all historians save Father BURKE, and come to the conclusion that it is of little use to discuss the past with a gentleman who makes his own history as he goes on. If a question is to be settled by a preponderance of facts on either side, and if our opponent claims and exercises the right of inventing as many facts as he needs to outnumber ours, we may as well admit at once that we have come out of the contest second best. Mr. FROUDE is an historian, and Father BURKE is a gentleman accustomed to deal with mankind on the theory that credulity is the first law of nature. When Mr. FROUDE comes to review the priest's facts, there will, probably, be some mild amusement to be derived from the spectacle. But at present he is going through a kind of discipline which is not new to heretics, but which may be new to Mr. FROUDE. We read in an evening paper of this City that "in New-Haven, the other evening, he was hustled by some rude persons." Still later, the "servants of the family in Boston at whose house he has been staying" have "refused to attend any longer upon the family while Mr. FROUDE remains in the house." We do not know what truth there may be in these stories; but we much fear that Mr. FROUDE is not in an earthly Paradise. His teeth must be set on edge by Father BURKE'S "history," as the teeth of a good musician would be by the scratchings of a plow-boy on the violin. And yet, as we see by a morning journal, Mr. FROUDE has been worsted by the monk—or, as the paper in question put the matter in its headlines, "Double-Jointed Historical Facts Hurled at the English Historian—Froude's Coat of Mail Cracked, and his Blood Trickling upon the Sand." Why should Mr. FROUDE have traveled three thousand miles to meet such a fate as that?

Intelligent and well-informed Americans go to hear Mr. FROUDE in limited numbers, and may, perhaps, obtain some new insight into facts from his lectures; but does he suppose that he is "making public opinion," or in any way changing the opinion of any class in reference to England and Ireland? Is public opinion on such a subject to be changed by a course of five lectures? We might as well talk of curing a wooden leg with a pill. Most people are too busy to inquire for themselves whether Mr. FROUDE or Father BURKE is right; some do not care about it one way or the other; others will be convinced, in spite of a hundred Froudes, that England is always and at all times wrong, and that, if she were not, an Englishman could not tell the truth about it; others have no opinions on the subject, and do not wish to have any; others think the whole controversy a bore—and so on. What is the good of arguing about it? Why grizzle over what cannot be helped? If Mr. FROUDE had a practical remedy to propose for the evils of which he treats, we should urge him to go on; but there is no remedy. Irish discontent is incurable. Then, why did Mr. FROUDE'S "blood trickle on the sand"? He speaks to the public through his books, and thus secures a much larger audience than he could do by delivering a course of lectures. Why be hustled at New-Haven, and treated with scorn and neglect by furious servant-girls? Why did Mr. FROUDE bring upon his head the awful, though pious, curses of Father BURKE, and draw from that terrific monk the solemn promise that when he is dying—may glory be his bed!—he will rise from his death-bed and scatter the foes of Ireland? Life is short, and it is not worth while to make it more full of sorrows than nature and fate have ordained.

Reformers versus Reform.

There is a small clique of professed reformers who are taking great pains just now to show how very little service they are able or willing to give to the cause of real reform. Several of the "independent" journals of the country are controlled by members of this clique. The temper in which they treat any practical attempt to abolish evils, is very much that of a pedantic gamekeeper, cudgeling poachers off his preserve, and accompanying his cudgeling with a display of smart quotations. These gentlemen not only seem to believe that they are the sole rightful owners in fee simple of all reform measures, but they make their belief manifest with no apparent misgivings that they are either unjust or ridiculous. Here, for instance, is the once respectable and even influential Springfield Republican, (whose forgiving editor traveled all the way to Cincinnati to enjoy the privilege of being cheated in company with DUDLEY FIELD,) raking its exchanges for material with which to discredit the President in his effort to reform the civil service. Gen. GRANT has committed the mortal offense of obtaining seventy-five thousand majority in Massachusetts, and, therefore, the Republican feels justified in misrepresenting him. It says that there are "semi-official outgivings at Washington" that "Gen. GRANT thinks the competitive examinations for office-seekers are a humbug, and that they should be abolished." It professes to be in ignorance of what the President's standard of efficiency for office-holders is, and as to who shall determine its possession, and it hints that all the President can do is to "arrogate all the offices to himself exclusively," until the country is "ruled by a President Potentate." Then, with an assumption of desperate devotion to reform in any shape, it declares that this is better than to be "ruled by a Congressional oligarchy."

We need not say that this is all based on the most reckless perversion of facts. The newspaper gossip referred to is neither "semi-official," nor demi-semi-official, nor official at all, and could not be. The President's views on competitive examinations are made manifest by his acts and by his messages, and he has never yet been driven to resort to newspapers at Washington or elsewhere to make them known to the country. His standard of efficiency for applicants for office is embodied in the rules which he has adopted and is strictly enforcing, and conformity to that standard is determined by the Boards and officers named in those rules. These are facts perfectly notorious, and they mark a stage of progress toward the reduction of a gigantic evil, at which every honest and sensible man must sincerely rejoice. They also mark a degree of progress never before even remotely obtained, and which, two years ago, the most hopeful friend of reform would have deemed it impossible to attain so soon, so safely, and with such promise of permanence. So far as the President has gone, he has, instead of "arrogating all the offices to himself exclusively," done the exact opposite. That is, he has determined to fill the offices from applicants selected either by examinations as impartial as they can be made, or by heads of departments who are required to choose from occupants of offices subordinate to those to be filled. What, then, is the fairness or the sense in talking about the "rule of a President Potentate" as the only alternative to that of a "Congressional oligarchy"? Such flippant attempts at misrepresentation, contemptible as they always are, were to be explained when they were foolishly supposed to influence public opinion as to the President as a candidate. But we should say the enormous majority in Massachusetts might show the Republican that they were mistaken then, and are doubly mistaken now, and that it would be better, in view of the result, to "assume a virtue if it have it not."

In like spirit, the Tribune launches its daily venture of insinuations. It hears talk of a "third term" for President GRANT. It "hopes" those who circulate it are "running before they are sent." It does not believe "they have received from the President, (or any one authorized to speak for him,)"—as if the President were in the habit of performing dirty work by underhand suggestion—"any intimation of such a desire." It "should prefer to be very slow in believing that he even cherishes it"—as if its preference were an exceedingly difficult one to indulge. And then it recites for the thousandth time the twaddle about its being necessary "to protect the incumbent by constitutional safeguards against the temptation of using the gigantic power of his place in furthering his personal ambition to retain it." The writer of these "ambiguous givings out" knows very well that the civil service has always been corrupted a hundred times more potently by the efforts of a party, and of Congressmen and Senators in the name of the party, to retain or gain power, than by the ambition of the President. He knows that for many years the President has controlled fewer appointments than any two influential Senators, or any half dozen influential Representatives. And he knows that the President has done more to overturn this system, and replace it by one that will secure appointments and promotion for merit and efficiency alone, than any man or party has ever done before. The Tribune is now anxious that the President shall devote himself to securing a limitation of the office to one term—a measure of harebrained and shallow theorists at best. The country does not wish him to do anything of the kind. He is engaged in much better business, and all honest and intelligent men will prefer that he should stick to that.

Mr. Creswell's Hobby.

It is reported from Washington that Mr. CRESWELL, Postmaster-General, is about to renew his recommendation of Postal Telegraphy. That is, he is about to ask Congress to set up the Post-office in the business of telegraphing. When this scheme was proposed last year, we promptly and earnestly opposed it, as did nearly all the leading papers of the country. The matter went to Congress, but nothing came of it, and it was made as clear as it well could be, that the country had not the slightest confidence in the proposition of Mr. CRESWELL. Why he should renew it now, we are at a loss to say. Certainly the objections already brought have not been met, and are not likely to be.

The chief objection is that the Post-office does not do its own work well enough to justify laying a much more difficult one on its shoulders. It is perfectly plain that the people who use the Post-office do not demand nearly as much from it as people who employ the telegraph companies demand from them, and the people do not get from the Post-office nearly all they demand. Most people would like regularity, rapidity, and frequency in the transmission of mails, at least in proportion to the needs of the population. They do not get them. Letters are not only outrageously delayed, and that very often, but, what is the worst feature of the case, the delay is never explained, and seems inexplicable. It is very nearly an act of despair to mail a letter in this City for Brooklyn, intending it to reach its destination within forty-eight hours, and all officials seem to regard the cause of this fact as one of those things which "no fellow can find out."

We may be told that this is a minor matter, and that the Department manages very well in the main. This may be true, but it is in precisely these minor matters that absolute trustworthiness would be required in telegraphing. The Post-office might do the general work tolerably well, but in managing the required details which go to make the transaction of telegraphing safe for the one side and profitable for the other, the Post-office, in its present condition, would be as helpless as a child. It need not be concluded that postal telegraphy will never be feasible in our country. It very well may be, but it will only be when the Department has shown capacity for doing its own comparatively simple work with accuracy and despatch.

Doubtless Mr. CRESWELL may be going to show us that the system of post-office telegraphs pays in England. We shall be glad to have any information he can give us on that point, but he must not allow himself to forget that the circumstances are vastly different in the two countries. It is quite possible that the Government in England can do the telegraphing for the country quite as well and more cheaply than private corporations. But the English civil service is far better than ours, and English telegraphing is far less expensive than ours. The greater portion of the expenditures of our telegraph companies is for labor, and labor is very much higher here than in England. Female telegraphists in London, for instance, receive fourteen shillings sterling per week, or fifteen dollars a month, in gold. The Western Union Telegraph Company pays the women employed by it in this City an average of fifty dollars per month. A similar, though not so great a difference exists in other departments of labor. Now, Mr. CRESWELL could not hope to get more work for less pay than the telegraph companies, and consequently he cannot present the rates in England as any fair criterion of what could be attained by the Government here.

But it is needless to go into details on this subject. It may be that Mr. CRESWELL is misrepresented, and does not intend any premature renewal of his scheme. We trust he does not. It would be a challenge to criticism on him and on his administration of the Department which, to speak plainly, he cannot afford.

Our Children's Fund.

The Board of Trustees of the TIMES Excursion and Relief Fund for Children, consisting of EDWARD KING, Esq., President of the New-York Stock Exchange; CHARLES H. MARSHALL, Esq., merchant, and GEORGE JONES, Esq., of the TIMES, met yesterday and completed their audit of the books kept by the Treasurer of the Fund and the Superintendents of the Relief Districts. It being necessary to have a legally-organized Board of Trustees, in order that the balance on hand might be kept in trust for another season, such organization was effected by the election of Mr. GEORGE JONES as President, Mr. EDWARD KING as Treasurer, and Mr. CHARLES MARSHALL as Secretary.

After a careful examination of all the bills, the Trustees expressed their satisfaction and approval by the following minute, which was ordered to be inserted in the ledger:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 26, 1872.

We, the undersigned, have looked over the books of the TIMES Excursion Fund, and the Fund for the relief of sick and destitute children, and find them admirably kept, showing the immense work accomplished, with every detail of expenditure, and from the internal evidence thus presented, we are satisfied that every dollar received from the public has been honestly and efficiently applied.

GEORGE JONES, President.
EDWARD KING, Treasurer.
CHARLES H. MARSHALL, Secretary.

The trustees then considered the question as to the best method of employing the money transferred to their hands. After some debate, it was decided that, the Fund having been raised for a specific purpose, namely, the procuring of healthful enjoyment for poor children, and the relief of sick ones, during the Summer months, the balance should be kept intact as a permanent Fund. The treasurer was, therefore, instructed to keep said balance in the hands of the New-York Trust Company, at interest, until the time arrived for renewing the operations of the Fund. This course was taken in the belief that it would meet the wishes of the contributors to the Fund, and at the same time insure the continuance of a much-needed work from year to year in the hot and sultry months of Summer.

As a matter of interest, we append a statement of the Fund as it stands at present:

Amount of Fund	$19,406 95
Drawn and expended by Treasurer	15,918 29
Balance with Trust Company	$3,488 66
Excursion expenses	10,714 17
Relief expenses	5,204 12
Total	$15,918 29
Balance unexpended	3,488 66
Grand total	$19,406 95

Since our last report we have received the following additional contributions, which have been added to the general Fund:

B.	$5 00
Ida J. S.	1 00
Total	$6 00
Previously acknowledged	$19,400 95
Grand total	$19,406 95

The "Golden Rule" with a New Interpretation.

On Tuesday, Nov. 5, Mr. GREELEY was defeated for the Presidency, and on Thursday, Nov. 7, he publicly resumed the editorship of the Tribune, which he said he had "relinquished on embarking in another line of business six months ago." If Mr. GREELEY had been content to retire from the field of political controversy, if he had not thus hastily resumed a position where it was inevitable that he must invite comment, he would have had no occasion to plead for forbearance. There was no disposition to treat him harshly. His unparalleled political misfortunes, and his domestic afflictions, had created a sympathy for him that nothing but his own subsequent indiscretion could repel. The public judgment concerning his political conduct, which was so emphatically expressed at the polls, could not have been changed in any event, but it would not have sought further expression. There was a general desire that the evil he had lately wrought should be permitted to fade out of the public recollection, and that only the good he had done in former years should be remembered.

We regret that Mr. GREELEY has forgotten a primal principle of moral conduct, and while asking to be forgiven his trespasses, is slow to forgive those who, in his view, trespass against him. Time and again, since he made himself responsible for its utterances, the Tribune has contained attacks upon the President and the Republican Party, which he could not expect to pass unnoticed unless charity for his misfortunes should silence criticism. Yesterday the Tribune "deplored" the pardon of Paymaster HODGE as "not an act calculated to check the prodigality in the use of public money, which has become one of the most startling features of the time." Yet in its news column was found full justification of the President, in the fact that HODGE receives his pardon only that he may be used as a witness against the stock jobbers who lured him to his ruin, and have in their possession the Government money which he lost. It is, therefore, obvious that the act which the Tribune criticises was demanded, as the special dispatch in the same paper declares, by "grave reasons of State."

We have no wish to palliate the crime which Paymaster HODGE committed, but we cannot forget the mitigating circumstances of his case. He made restitution to the Government to the extent of every penny which he possessed; he promptly surrendered himself to the penalties of the law he had violated, and never attempted to take refuge in those technicalities which were sought with such alacrity by TWEED, HALL, and other Ring thieves, for whose far more outrageous crimes the Tribune has never had hearty condemnation. We must remember, also, that Paymaster HODGE has been condemned by the law, has suffered severe punishment, and that TWEED and his partners in guilt are as yet unscathed. It does not become the apologist for these men to speak harshly of the remission of a portion of the penalty meted out to a lesser offender.

There is no duty more unpleasant than to deny to Mr. GREELEY the charity which is asked by his friends because of his afflictions, and there is none which is more imperative. When he abandons the control of the Tribune, that journal can be dealt with independently of him, but so long as he chooses to make himself responsible for its conduct, there can be no just complaint if others do by him as he does unto others. Certainly it cannot be expected that the Tribune shall be permitted to go unchecked in its attacks upon Republican representatives and measures, because its editor has met with a political defeat almost without parallel in history. Justice to the great cause we have at heart will not permit us to act upon a theory so absurd in itself, and which would be so mischievous in its result. No public man ever before put in such a plea in bar of public judgment as has been made for Mr. GREELEY. He is to be held sacred from criticism, while his paper goes on attacking the reputations and destroying the characters of other men. If Mr. GREELEY would find mercy, let him show mercy to others. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways, and the golden rule was never intended to have a one-sided application.

MINOR TOPICS.

During the past week, a bit of romance has occurred in the Children's Aid Society, which hardly seems to belong to this matter-of-fact age. A number of years since, the reports of the Society gave an account of a sad event in Brooklyn. A woman had been murdered by her drunken husband, and a kind lady of that city discovered three wretched little children weeping over the corpse—two boys and a girl. They were utterly friendless, after the arrest and imprisonment of the father. The two boys were brought to the Newsboys' Lodging-house in New-York, and the girl temporarily sheltered. At length the Society sent the two lads to homes in the West, and the girl was adopted by a gentleman of property, near the City. The latter never knew that her adopted father was not her own. The boys have now grown up and acquired property—one being a druggist and the other a farmer. They have been extremely anxious to communicate with their sister, and have been in correspondence with her guardian for some time. During the past week they revisited the City for the first time—very well-educated young men, in good circumstances. They visited the Girls' Lodging-house, the Newsboys', and other institutions of the Society. The adopted father of their sister consented that they should see her in his office, provided they did not disclose their relationship, as she was only fifteen, and he wished her to suppose herself his daughter, so that her affection might not be weakened for a few years longer. She is to inherit his property. They felt the propriety of this, and had their interview with her, last week, without discovering their relationship, and then returned, well satisfied, to the West.

There is an end of the Arizona diamond hoax at last. A party sent out from San Francisco to make a geological survey of the "diamond region" has returned and made its report. The chief of the expedition, Mr. CLARENCE KING, asserts that in the places where he found small diamonds and rubies, there was abundant evidence that the process known to California miners as "salting" had been performed. In other words, the gems had been brought and placed where Mr. KING found them. He unhesitatingly declares that no diamonds or rubies can be found in the neighborhood, except those that have been brought there "with intent to deceive," and that the whole story of the Arizona diamond field is the work of swindlers. We have never credited the preposterous reports which have appeared from time to time in reference to these Arizona gems, and those who have gone to search for them have done so in spite of our repeated warnings.

That the nitro-glycerine tragedy at Yonkers should cause intense excitement, and that everybody in the neighborhood should condemn the railroad contractor for leaving the compound "in a spot where any catastrophe could possibly occur," is entirely natural; but this general censure, nevertheless, seems to us unjust. It appears that the dangerous stuff was isolated, and inclosed with a fence on which were placards saying: "Let nothing tempt you to touch, or even go near, the contents of the inclosure; it is nitro-glycerine." In the face of this warning, four heedless young men were anxious to ascertain the effects of an explosion, and therefore threw stones at the cans in which the compound was stored, with the result of blowing two of them to atoms, and maiming the other two for life. The catastrophe is very lamentable, but it is impossible to imagine what precautions the contractor could have taken to prevent its occurrence against such reckless bravado as was displayed by its victims.

In former days there was a popular belief that the efficacy of medicines was in proportion to their nauseousness. It was evidently upon this principle that Robinson Crusoe, when [illegible] from fever, cured himself with [illegible] He drank in the full belief that, as it was the most nauseous preparation within his reach, it must therefore be the best remedy for fever. A day or two since a correspondent of one of our daily papers proposed a remedy for chills and fever, which he had frequently tried, and which was plainly made up in accordance with the Crusoe theory of medicine. The patient was directed to drink an entire bucketful of warm water as an emetic. After this had produced its effect, he was to follow it with a heavy dose of calomel. The next day the treatment was to be varied by substituting castor-oil for the calomel, and the patient was subsequently to take large quantities of quinine. This remarkable remedy, excellent as it may be, is not quite perfect. The castor-oil should be followed by a bar of soap and a quart of clean sand. The patient would then be so completely free from disease that no quinine would be necessary.

Little has been gained, we fear, for the safety of railway travelers by the fact that the conductor of the delayed train involved in the recent disaster near Wilmington, Del., has been found guilty by the Coroner's jury of culpable negligence, and that a warrant has been issued for his arrest. It is some encouragement, no doubt, that even this pretense of vigor has followed a tragedy by which two lives were lost, but we have had this much in so many previous cases, without anything more being done, that we are not sure we are now to have a conclusion that will make conductors more careful in the future. The guarantee against danger in railway traveling is, moreover, in the adoption and enforcement by the companies of rules which will make disasters of the ordinary kind impossible. Isolated cases of punishment for negligence will doubtless decrease the risk of accident, but only by a thorough reformation of our railroad equipment and management can we be reasonably certain that each journey we take will not be the last.

Some time since, the TIMES commented upon the brutal outrage perpetrated by a company of men at Huntington, Long Island, upon a young man named KELSEY. This unfortunate person was tarred and feathered by the yokels of the village, and since that time has disappeared. There is good reason to believe that he wandered into the woods, and there died from the effects of his brutal treatment. As yet, the authorities of the village have taken no steps whatever to arrest the practical jokers who were guilty of so cruel an offense. Several of the respectable residents of the place, having grown tired of waiting upon the dilatory Justices of the Peace, have finally formed an association for the purpose of bringing the culprits to punishment. It is earnestly to be hoped that they will succeed in this excellent purpose, and will redeem their village from the present disgrace which rests upon it.

The violent stage of the horse disease has passed away, but it is now asserted that other animals have been attacked by a similar disease. From the Adirondack region comes the report that the deer are dying, and that numbers of them have been found dead in the woods. The same epidemic seems to have attacked the few deer that still haunt the further extremity of Long Island, and yesterday it was asserted that the epidemic had appeared among the Long Island swine. Very probably these rumors may have little foundation, and, at all events, they are probably exaggerated. Still, it seems that there is something in the atmosphere which is injurious to the health of quadrupeds. There are as yet no signs of any epidemic among men, but common sense suggests that particular care should be taken to keep the streets of the City as clean as possible, and that everyone should guard against the attacks of diphtheria and other throat diseases.

The Italian Government has announced its intention of putting an end to the practice of dueling, now prevalent in the peninsula, and has begun the work by imprisoning or exiling two or three participants in recent duels. Since the consolidation of Italy created an Italian army, the officers of the latter have decidedly surpassed the Frenchmen in the number and triviality of their duels. The fashion has spread among civilians also, and the bitterness of Italian political factions has given occasion to countless duels. While the Government may be able to restrain those in its immediate service from fighting without serious cause, it cannot break up the fashion of dueling until public sentiment declares against it. So long as it is considered cowardly to decline a challenge, duels will be fought, and only among a people whose moral courage is rated at least as high as physical courage, will public opinion sustain a man in declining to fight.

Authority having been given the Mayor to grant permits for the use of steam-dummies in place of horses on our street railroads, an imperative necessity has arisen to increase the working force of the Coroner's office. Experience will soon prove that the use of steam as a motor on our surface tracks will not secure any additional speed or comfort in City transit, and is intended only to increase the gains of the railroad corporations at the expense of the public safety. When this fact is established, as it will be speedily, we shall return to the old system, and the sole result of the experiment will be to delay the introduction of the means of quick transit, which can never be secured by surface roads.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Effort to Elect a United States Senator to Succeed Hon. John Pool.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 26.—The all-important business in both Houses today was the ballot for United States Senator. The presiding officers of both Houses, when the hour arrived, counseled order and decorum, and said no undue enthusiasm was to be exhibited when nominations were made or the result announced, and ordered the door-keepers to close the lobbies and galleries if any applause was given. Eighteen Democrats bolted from the caucus nomination last night when it was ascertained that ex-Gov. Vance would be nominated. The ballot commenced in both Houses at noon. Of the 169 votes, Vance, Democrat, received 78; Merrimon, Democrat, 18; Pool, Republican, 73; necessary to a choice, 85. Both Houses adjourned until to-morrow. Many rumors are rife in regard to the probable result to-morrow, but none are reliable. The Republicans have been very active since the morning session, but their plans are unknown.

ALABAMA.

The Legislative Troubles—A Settlement Not Yet Effected.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 26.—The branch of the Legislature at the Capitol did nothing special today. The other branch sent a committee to wait on the new Governor, Lewis. The Committee reported that they had waited on the Governor, and that he would communicate to-morrow. The Committee further stated that he (the Governor) gave reasons for his delay which it was best to communicate in caucus. They then adjourned, the spectators retired, and the body became a Republican caucus. The result of their deliberations on the purport of the Governor's statement to them is not known. It is rumored, however, that a committee of ten was appointed to confer with a like committee from the Democratic side.

THE NORTH-WESTERN CORNER.

Its Collapse Yesterday—"Settling Up"—Card from Mr. Vanderbilt.

The corner in "North-western" gave way yesterday, owing to general settlements by the shorts. Its collapse occasioned little excitement. The amount which the "bull clique" have realized from the transaction is variously stated at from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000. Henry N. Smith has not settled, so far as is known. Daniel Drew, it is generally understood, has settled at prices ranging from 125 to 200—the greater part at the former figure.

The Necessity of Reform in Wall-Street.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am very glad to see in your paper of today such plain-spoken statements in regard to the present state of affairs in Wall-street.

The whole matter lies in a nutshell, and the sooner we all comprehend it the better. It is not a question of finance, or business, or political economy—it is simply a question of morality. By long habit, we have got into the way of thinking that gambling, obtaining money under false pretenses, or defrauding the unwary in any way, is perfectly justifiable, so long as done in the sacred precincts of Wall-street.

We have only ourselves to blame for it that things have come to their present pass. We have gone on encouraging the spirit of "speculation," as we choose to call it, until not only Wall-street, but almost every department of trade, has become saturated with the evil, and its consequential damages of extravagance, immorality, and corruption of every sort. In a word, the tone of public morality has sunk so low that public opinion tolerates the commission of any crime against honesty, justice or truth that is not clearly designated as a crime in the statute-book, and men even boast of their ability to do such things, and so the evil grows space. What we would have considered dishonorable twenty years ago, we now consider shrewd; what we would often have called tricky, we now call clever; what we would then have thought mercenary, we now think mercantile: what we would then have denounced as a swindle, we now commend as a "bold operation." The consequence of all this is that multitudes are now striving to enrich themselves not by honest labor, or by the development of natural resources, but by getting hold of each others' money. Now it stands to reason that if all the members of a community are trying to "squeeze" each other, a great many will be squeezed; and in the long run, loss and ruin must ensue.

For all this there is but one remedy. We must all of us—as a community and as individuals—discountenance and frown down this entire system of speculation, cornering, squeezing, and similar styles of getting money without giving an equivalent for it. It is useless to pass laws to check the evil. There never was a law framed that a Wall-street sharper could not evade. Nothing can avail in this case but public opinion; and if public opinion, animated with honor and justice, will make a determined attack upon the whole system of financial brigandage, and decree that the same code of morals shall hold in Wall-street as elsewhere, it would not be many days before the entire fraternity of gamblers and thimble-riggers would slink into the back slums where they belong, and the sharp-mustached, flashily-dressed men who now hang about the Stock Exchange would confine their operations to the race-course and the faro-bank.

New-York stands today disgraced in the eyes of the whole civilized world as the tolerator of such iniquity. Cannot public opinion, which has already dealt such telling blows upon Municipal corruption, also crush out this monstrous spirit of wickedness, which is fast undermining the foundations of public and private virtue?

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Nov. 26, 1872.

THE ARREST OF JAY GOULD.

Statement in Relation Thereto from Horace F. Clark.

In compliance with an order granted by Judge Fancher, Messrs. Horace F. Clark and Augustus Schell appeared, yesterday, before Mr. A. R. Macdonough, as referee, to make depositions, to be used in support of the application of counsel to vacate the order on which Jay Gould was recently arrested. Mr. Clark testified in substance as follows:

I own a considerable amount of active and speculative stocks, including a number of shares of Chicago and North-western common and Lake Shore. Shortly before the Boston fire, there had been extensive dealings in the former stock, while Lake Shore fluctuated considerably. And this unsettled state of things continues up to the present time. In North-western there was an active speculation, involving a conflict of views and interests. It was asserted that the North-western Company intended issuing a large amount of common stock, by the issue of bonds immediately convertible into stock, as was done in 1868 by the Pacific Company, under Drew, Gould, and Smith. The holders of North-west Common were opposed to the issue, while those who were "short" favored it. It was expected that the Boston fire would produce a panic in the stock market, but the activity in North-west Common, and the strength of holders, sustained the market and prevented the panic. Those who held the stock and relied upon the panic anticipations were large sellers, and were not careful in all instances to own the stock on which they made speculative sales. Prior to the Boston fire there had been a great depression in the price of stocks, caused by the currency lock up alleged to have been made at the procurement of Drew, Gould, and Smith. It is undoubted that Drew and Smith were short of North-western Common through their brokers, while Gould owned a large number of the shares. The latter, therefore, were interested in depression, while it was to Gould's interest to sustain and demand the market price. Mr. Augustus Schell and myself owned some North-western, and were therefore opposed to depression, but, owning other stocks also, we were opposed to panic. On the afternoon of Nov. 21, it was rumored that a scheme had been devised to cause the arrest of Gould at a time and under circumstances calculated to produce a panic, and cause a depression in the stock market. The names of Drew and Smith were connected by rumor with the scheme, and it was asserted that persons connected with the Erie Railway Company were also parties to it. About noon, on the 22d, I called on Mr. P. H. Watson, President of the Erie Railway Company, at the up-town office of the Company, and stated the case to him, informing him of the current rumors in respect to the action of the Company. I told him that it was openly stated and believed that Henry N. Smith had arranged with the Erie Railway Company to make certain statements implicating Gould, and, in return, be released from his common liability with Gould and Drew, in respect of those transactions. In reply, Mr. Watson informed me that he had not agreed to release either Smith or Drew, and in relation to the release of the Company to Gould, he stated that he was advised by counsel that it was invalid. I spoke of the rumor that disregarding Gould's release, it was part of a scheme to obtain an order for excessive bail, and so time the arrest as to ruin Gould financially, and result in general havoc in the stock market, and I suggested that it was not good policy to ruin the business interests of a man alleged to owe the Erie Company the sum of $5,000,000. Mr. Watson disclaimed any intention on his part to molest Gould unreasonably or unnecessarily, and added that he had given express instructions to make the arrest in the morning and not at night. Mr. Watson also disclaimed any knowledge of the stock-jobbing part of the affair, and I myself am convinced that he did so with truth.

After leaving Mr. Watson I went down-town, reaching my office at 2 P. M. I met Mr. Schell, who told me that he had learned that something was about to happen which would create a panic. On hearing this Gould was in custody we went together to the office where the arrest was made, and offered to give bail on the spot. I read over the original order of arrest, and noticed that the amount of bail ($1,000,000) was inserted by the erasure of the sum of nine millions and upward, the alterations being apparently made in the handwriting of the Judge who signed the order. I also observed that on the paper on which the order was granted was the existence of the release of the Erie Railway Company to Gould was not alleged.

The most important time of the day on Wall-street is between 2½ and 3 P. M., as during that period accounts must be margined to meet the fluctuations of the day; by margin, I mean a deposit in currency equal to the difference in price. I think, therefore, that the arrest was made at the most unreasonable time, so far as Gould's business interests were concerned, and had he been held in custody during the remainder of the day, he would have been financially ruined. Few, if any men in New-York, could procure $9,000,000 bail within an hour, and there are not many who could obtain sureties for a million within that period. Taking all these things into consideration, I am of the opinion that the whole affair was simply a scheme in the interests of those who were short of North-western stock, and desired to create a panic and a depression in price in order to meet their engagements without loss.

(Signed,) HORACE F. CLARK.

Mr. Schell's testimony will be taken today, and on Monday the motion to vacate the order of arrest will come up for a hearing in the Courts.

The Second-Avenue Railroad Extension—Investigation Yesterday—Interesting Railroad Facts.

The investigation as to the compensation to be paid the City by the Second-avenue Railroad Company for the branch line and extensions to be constructed, was continued yesterday.

E. J. W. Butler, President of the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company, was examined at great length, and testified that the extensions would not be of immediate profit to the Company in consequence of the great cost of construction and equipment, but in time they would be a source of gain; the proper basis on which to value the franchise is the increased gain to the Company; it is impossible to make a street railroad pay, with the fare at five cents, without crowding its cars; the Canal-street branch of the Sixth-avenue road does not pay; our franchise compels us to run cars upon it with fifteen minutes' headway; every bond of our Company has been paid for in cash; the gross earnings of the line for the year ending in September, 1872, is $700,000, and the net earnings probably $80,000, but I cannot answer positively just now; the value of the real estate of the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company is $1,200,000; the pavement on Second-avenue, between Twenty-third and Forty-second streets, is disgraceful to the City, and vehicles can only be driven upon the car-tracks; the carriage-way has not been repaired in ten years; the railroads help to increase the population, and the increase of the population helps to add to the gains of the companies; the number of cars run by a railroad company cannot be indefinitely increased, though the limit to the number that can be crowded into a single car has never been reached; when the Second-avenue line was being constructed, a great deal of opposition was created and indignation meetings were held, but on its completion the value of property was much increased; owners of houses expatriated on the increased facilities afforded by the railroad, and added $100 to $200 a year to the annual rental; business is improved, and a general benefit is derived from the construction of the road.

To Judge Bischoff—If franchises be granted to rival companies to run their tracks along each of the parallel avenues, it would detract from the value of the Second-avenue franchise in proportion to the number of passengers taken away from the latter. The Third-avenue Railroad loses money by running their cars above Yorkville.

William Richardson, President of the Atlantic-avenue Railroad, Brooklyn, testified that he had been connected with City railroads for eight years, and is now director of three; is acquainted with the line of the Second-avenue Railroad, and its proposed extensions; does not think that the additions will add to the net income of the Company; a dividend should not be declared before the cost of equipment, construction, maintenance, with seven per cent. added, should be guaranteed; the Astor-place branch will cost much more in proportion to its extent than the rest of the line; the Worth-street line is the only one of any value.

The further hearing was adjourned to Friday.

MORE ABOUT STREET-OPENINGS.

Mr. George H. Purser Resigns—The Madison-Avenue and Other Openings.

Mr. George H. Purser, clerk in the "Bureau of Street-openings," has addressed a letter of resignation to the several Commissioners in the following Street-opening Commissions, to which he has hitherto acted as clerk:

Opening: Ninety-first-street, from Fourth-avenue to the East River; Seventieth-street, from Fourth to Fifth-avenue, and from Third-avenue to the East River; Seventy-fourth-street, from Eighth-avenue to the Hudson River: One Hundred and Fortieth street, from Eighth-avenue to Harlem River; One Hundred and Forty-second-street, from Eighth-avenue to Harlem River; One Hundred and Forty-fourth-street, from Eighth-avenue to Harlem River; Avenue A, from One Hundredth to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street; Seventy-third-street, from Fifth-avenue to East River; One Hundred and Forty-third-street, from Eighth-avenue to Harlem River; Eighty-first-street, from the Boulevard to the new road on Drive; Eighty-fifth-street, from Ninth-avenue to the New Road, and from Twelfth-avenue to the Hudson River; Eighty-eighth-street, from Avenue A to the New Road, and from Twelfth-avenue to the Hudson River; Eighty-ninth-street, from Eighth-avenue to the New Road or Drive, and from Twelfth-avenue to the Hudson River; Ninety-first-street, Ninety-third-street, Ninety-fifth-street, Ninety-second-street, Ninety-fourth street, all same limits; One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, from Ninth-avenue to Boulevard; One Hundred and Thirty-fifth-street, from Boulevard to Bloomingdale Road; improving King's Bridge Road, from One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street to Harlem River; opening Lexington-avenue, from One Hundred and Second-street to Harlem River; Ninety-seventh and Ninety-eighth-street, from Eighth-avenue to Boulevard.

The following is the letter:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 25, 1872.

GENTLEMEN: On reflection I have decided to resign the position of clerk in the above proceeding. While pronouncing the charges made against my personal character as wholly untrue or grossly exaggerated, I cannot dispute the fact that public suspicion is attached to appointments associated with the Tammany Ring, an organization which, however, I have consistently opposed since 1869. Distrust between the public and its agents—whether well or ill founded—must seriously embarrass and impair relations which should exist in all the departments of the Municipal Government. Under this conviction I surrender my appointment and all claims for compensation for services rendered.

Yours truly, GEO. H. PURSER.

Today the three Commissioners for the opening of Madison-avenue, Gratz Nathan, Justice Fowler, and C. K. Price, go over the ground proposed to be taken for the extension, and will subsequently hear objections from the property-owners assessed for the improvement. An examination of the list of awards for the lots taken, and comparison with the conveyances of some of these lots made since or about the time the Commission was appointed, reveals some interesting facts. Mr. William T. Ryerson, of Harlem, bought, in September, 1870, four lots, for which he paid $24,000. These lots were found to directly on the line of the extension, and Mr. Ryerson's name appears on the list of awards for $37,000. Many other instances of remarkable foresight on the part of several gentlemen, residents of Harlem, are also to be found by examination of the records.

There are also a number of other street-opening schemes, some of them closed and others still pending.

The Nitro-Glycerine Explosion at Yonkers—Coroner's Inquest on the Remains.

The shocking accident which occurred within the city limits of Yonkers on Monday last, still excites considerable attention in the neighborhood. Yesterday an inquest was held on the remains of the two victims of the explosion, George Hill and Michael Callagee. Neither the head nor the lower portion of Hill's legs could be found, although the police authorities and a number of private citizens made a most rigid and extended search for them.

William Terry, who was the least injured of the party, having shielded himself behind a tree as much as possible from the effects of the explosion, testified that on the Coroner's jury that while he and his companions were on the line of the New-York and Boston Railroad, they discovered one or more cans of some material, which they examined to see what it was composed of, and George Hill threw a stone on one can, which, with the others, exploded, and killed George Hill and Michael Callagee immediately. At the time the stone was thrown, Hill, he (Terry) told his companions that the material was dangerous, and should not be touched.

Donnelly attempted to run out of harm's way, when he observed that Hill was about to hurl a stone at cans of nitro-glycerine and heard Terry warn him of the danger, but he suffered terribly from concussion of the air, and stones, gravel, earth, and splinters of wood were driven into every part of his body. It is believed, however, by Dr. Balch, hospital surgeon, that both Terry and Donnelly will recover.

The jury, in rendering their verdict that Hill and Callagee came to their deaths by the explosion, censured the contractor on the line of the work on the New-York and Boston Railroad for leaving the nitro-glycerine exposed to the traveling public.

The Late Outrage in Harlem—Action by the Citizens.

A meeting of the citizens of the Twelfth Ward was held on Monday evening, 25th inst., at Lincoln Hall, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, for the purpose of consulting as to what steps should be taken with regard to the murderous assault on Mr. Henry Bull last Thursday night. Col. Geo. P. Webster acted as President; Wm. H. Colwell and others as Vice-Presidents; Thomas Landon, Secretary. The house was well filled with an audience composed of the prominent citizens of Harlem. Resolutions were passed condemning the outrage, and a committee of five was appointed to offer $500 as a reward for the conviction of the ruffian. The authorities were also recommended to erect a fence around the square opposite Sylvan-place. Mr. Webster, Capt. Hart, and Lawson N. Fuller addressed the audience. The Committee appointed were James M. Boyd, Thomas Hanson, Charles Macgregor, Dr. Dennison, and E. G. Selchow. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Mr. William H. Bull, an orderly, law-abiding citizen, has been stricken down in the public streets by a cruel and murderous blow; and

Whereas, We, the citizens and residents of the Twelfth Ward, feel it to be our duty to denounce and condemn the act, therefore be it

Resolved, That the act is one calculated to excite the anxiety of all good citizens, and to stimulate to renewed vigilance every friend of law and order, and every man who desires safety for himself and protection for his neighbor.

Resolved, That we, the citizens of the Twelfth Ward, hereby pledge ourselves to stand by the authorities and do all in our power to further the ends of justice.

Resolved, That the appointment of a committee of five is recommended, with power to raise money to be offered as a reward for the apprehension and conviction of the would-be assassin, and that the sum of $1,000 be suggested by the committee.

Resolved, That the open square lying between One Hundred and Twentieth and One Hundred and Twenty-first streets, Third-avenue, and Sylvan-place, in its present condition is a nuisance, and a lurking-place for dangerous characters, and the City authorities are requested to inclose the same forthwith.

Suit Against the President of the Atlantic Mail Steam-ship Company.

Wm. W. Watson, of the firm of Ingersoll, Watson & Co., chairmakers, has begun a suit in the Supreme Court against A. W. Dimock, President of the Atlantic Mail Steam-ship Company, and Helen W. Dimock, claiming judgment for $23,678 47. The cause of action is set forth as follows, in the affidavit: On May 4, 1871, the defendants executed and delivered to James H. Ingersoll a bond, under seal, in the sum of $100,000, secured by mortgage upon real estate in Elizabeth, N. J., to secure the payment of the sum of $50,000, six months after the date thereof, and the bond being conditioned for the payment of the sum of $50,000, as provided in the mortgage. On the 18th of September, 1871, Ingersoll assigned the bond and mortgage to the plaintiff. The defendants did not fulfill the condition of the bond, but the sum secured by the bond and mortgage has become due, and has not been paid.

The mortgage has been foreclosed in an action to which the defendants were parties, and the real estate upon which it was a lien was, on Nov. 21, 1872, sold under a decree of the Court of Chancery in New-Jersey, and the proceeds have been applied toward payment of the mortgage debt. After so applying the proceeds there is a deficiency remaining upon the mortgage debt of $23,678 47.

An attachment has been issued against the property of the defendants, consisting of Atlantic Mail stock and real estate in this City. It was rumored yesterday that Mr. Dimock had been arrested, but on investigation the report was found incorrect.

THE ANDRE MURDER TRIAL.

A Verdict of Manslaughter in the Third Degree.

The trial of Emil André for the murder of his wife, Leonie P. André, on the 18th of June last, was continued yesterday in the Court of General Sessions, before Judge Bedford. Mr. Dospassos asked the Judge to charge the importance of the evidence of the prisoner's insanity and irresponsibility at the time of the commission of the crime. He also presented the instruments of separation between André and his wife.

In charging the jury, Judge Bedford said that before they could acquit the prisoner, they must be thoroughly convinced of his inability to distinguish between right and wrong, and that if not laboring under a delusion he was responsible. If the prisoner was sane, and the killing was done in the heat of passion, and without preconceived intent to kill, they must bring in a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree. If they found the prisoner sane and responsible, and that he had a premeditated design to kill, they must promptly declare him guilty of the murder of his wife.

On request of Mr. Dospassos, the Judge reminded the jury that they were to receive the evidence of the prisoner's good character and his good treatment of his wife.

At noon the jury retired, but returned at 1¼ and asked for a repetition of the definitions of manslaughter in the first and third degrees. The Judge read the language of the statute twice over to the jurors, and in compliance with the request of prisoner's counsel, instructed them that if their verdict was to be manslaughter in either degree, if there was any doubt they must give the prisoner the benefit of it, and make their verdict for the lesser offense.

The jury then retired for the second time, and after waiting until nearly 5 o'clock the Judge withdrew, with instructions that he should be summoned in the event of a verdict being agreed upon or further instructions being needed.

At 5½ o'clock, Judge Bedford took his seat again on the bench, and the jury entering the Court, were asked by the Clerk if they had agreed upon a verdict. The foreman answered that they had agreed upon a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree, and each member having subscribed to it, they were discharged. The prisoner was remanded to the Tombs, from which he had been brought, to await sentence.

The Last Meeting of the Board of County Canvassers—Final Declaration of the Vote.

The Board of County Canvassers held its final meeting last evening. Several corrections in the previous returns were made, and the official declarations were read by the Secretary, and the figures were declared official.

The Board then provided for the payment of its employes and clerks, and votes of thanks were given to various employes.

The following papers were selected for printing the official canvass, they having the largest circulation: TIMES, News, Sun, Herald, and Staats Zeitung.

Supervisor Martin objected to the Sun, and Supervisor Radde to the Staats Zeitung. It had said he had only 231 votes. If they had 50,000 circulation they had told 50,000 lies. He would vote no.

The question was then put as to what should be published. Mr. Plunkitt wished that the vote should be published by districts, so that it might be a record, but it was decided that only the official statement, with such omissions as the County Clerk should choose to make, with a view to compliance with the economic purposes of the law, should be advertised.

The Board declared the following persons elected: Wm. F. Havemeyer, Mayor; Benjamin K. Phelps, District-Attorney; Josiah Sutherland, City Judge; Adolph Kessler, Coroner, and Hooper C. Van Vorst, Justice of the Superior Court.

The Board then adjourned sine die.

Father Burke on the Future of Ireland.

A very large audience greeted Father Burke at the Academy of Music last evening on the occasion of his lecture on "The Future of Ireland," with a further reply to Mr. Froude. At the outset, Father Burke apologized in the name of his Irish fellow-countrymen for the discourtesy recently shown to Mr. Froude in Boston, and then spoke at length of the Irish movement of 1782, and the rebellion of 1798. If, he said, England was so willing to redress every Irish grievance, as time passed on, why was it not granted, in the name of God why did she hold out until, in 1780, she was obliged, at the cannon's mouth, to yield the commercial independence of Ireland? As to Catholic emancipation, England granted that as a bad tooth was given up to the dentist, and it was Daniel O'Connell who thrust the forceps into the Lion's mouth. The British Empire, Father Burke thought, was fast crumbling to decay; and when the day of Macaulay's New-Zealander arrived, Ireland would be mistress of her own destiny, if she proved true to her traditions. In fact, was there not every reason to suppose that, in the near future, she would stretch her arm across the Atlantic to this mighty people, and be received by them into the great confederation of States? A vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer at the close.

The Jersey City Police Trouble.

The difficulty between the new and old Jersey City Police Commissions was not settled on Monday. Messrs. Parker and Dixon appeared before the Supreme Court for the old Commissioners, and Messrs. Ransom and Abbett for the new. On the motion for a mandamus Chief-Justice Beasley said for the Court that nothing appeared in Mr. Ransom's plea to show that the old Commissioners had committed any crime against their office. Mr. Ransom then desired to amend his plea by adding the official records. He was then instructed to amend the plea, and present it in its new form before noon of yesterday, and the Court would then take into consideration a motion to quash the writ. An adjournment was then had until last evening, when the argument was resumed. At a late hour no result had been reached.

Pursuit of a Thief—He Jumps Into the River and is Drowned.

At 7½ o'clock last evening, a colored man about twenty years of age, whose name and residence are unknown, stole a coat from the store of E. Morris, No. 519 Canal-street. He was detected in the act, and ran off down Watts-street, pursued by Patrolman Scanlon, of the Fifth Precinct. The fugitive crossed West-street to the river front, and deliberately jumped overboard. The negro sank, and, as he did not rise to the surface, it is supposed that he was drowned.

The Meteoric Shower on Sunday Night.

From the New-Haven Palladium, Nov. 26.

Sunday evening, between 7½ and 12½ o'clock, were counted about 250 shooting stars, of which over three-fourths eradiated from Gamma Andromedæ. These meteoric bodies evidently form a part of what was formerly called Biela's comet. In 1846 that body was seen to divide into two comets, which, at their next return in 1852, were a million and a quarter of miles apart. Since that time neither portion of the comet has been seen, though their third passage of the node should have taken place about six weeks ago. Astronomers have been suspecting that it had entirely gone to pieces, and that it would not again be seen. Sunday evening were seen, as above stated, about 250 fragments of the comet. A larger number of observers would probably have been able to count 700 or 800 in the time named. The process of breaking up has evidently been going on a long time. Mr. Herrick saw in, 1846, Dec. 6, quite a number of the fragments, though he did not then know that they had any connection with this or any comet.

ABANDONED.

Report of the Captain of the Steam-ship Carolina—Ten Days of Constant Battling with the Sea.

The following is the report of the Captain of the steam-ship Carolina, (British,) from Baltimore Oct. 26, for Queenstown, abandoned Nov. 14, in lat. 44 N., lon. 53 20 W.:

Monday, Nov. 4—Terrific westerly gales and squalls prevailed, with thunder and lightning, and a very heavy sea running, the ship scudding before it under all steam. At 8 A. M. there were tremendous gales and sea, the vessel shipping heavy seas on deck, breaking the engineers' and mates' houses up, washing all the inside out, breaking in the front of the galley, and washing all the berths down on the starboard side of bridge and filling stoke-hole. The carpenters and all hands engaged in securing the stoke-hole and other places in the best way they could, with boards and canvas. At noon the wind veered suddenly to the northward, blowing a hurricane, with a tremendous sea running. The ship came to against her port helm and filled the fore deck with water, and under the bridge, the water running down upon the boilers. At 2 P. M. the Chief Engineer reported to the Captain that the starboard fires were slaked out, and that he could only steam with one boiler. At 3 P. M., the water gaining on the stoke-hole, slaked out our port fires and stopped the engine. We soon got the donkey fire lighted, though with great difficulty, the place being constantly flooded with water. At 8 P. M. steam was up in the donkey steam-boiler, and we tried to start the pump, but being so immersed in the water it would not pump, the steam condensing with the cold water. All hands were now employed bailing with buckets, and still the water gained. At 11 P. M. we commenced to throw the cargo overboard as a means to keep the ship afloat. At midnight there was ten feet of water in the engine-room.

Tuesday, Nov. 5—All hands were employed in throwing cargo overboard. The weather moderating, we found the water was not gaining on us.

6 P. M.—We commenced bailing out of the stoke-hole and pumping with the hand-pumps, half of the hands being below in watches during the night.

Wednesday, Nov. 6—Fine, moderate weather; all hands pumping and bailing with buckets out of stoke-hole. Lifted the valves in the fore and aft holds and gained on the water in the engine-room two feet. Half of the hands were pumping and bailing all night. Two or three of them got the boats ready in case we should have to leave the ship.

Thursday, Nov. 7—Fine, moderate weather. We gained on the water this day six feet. Got the donkey fire on and got the donkey-pump to work, with all hands pumping and bailing, and reduced the water to three feet in the stoke-hole by midnight. The ship had a strong list to starboard. The depth of water in holds was two feet in the after-hold, two feet in the tunnel, five fore-hold, and three feet in the engine-room.

Friday, Nov. 8—Fresh southerly winds, with threatening weather. We got the port fires lighted, to try to get up steam. At 6 A. M. we succeeded, and 7½ A. M. got the engines going, and headed the ship north north-east, for St. Johns, N. F. At noon there were strong gales, with a heavy sea, and we were shipping heavy seas on deck, and keeping all hands bailing and pumping. The latter part of the day strong gales and heavy sea continued, and all hands were kept pumping and bailing, without lowering the water any in the stoke-hole. All the engine pumps were choked with coals and ashes.

Saturday, Nov. 9—Strong south-west gales, with a heavy sea. All hands were still pumping and bailing, and engines were still going, with one boiler, the firemen firing up in water up to waist. At noon the weather was more moderate, with a falling sea. We got one of the bilge pumps to work, and all hands were busy bailing and pumping. At midnight we had lowered the water so that we could light two of the starboard fires.

Sunday, Nov. 10—Moderate gale, with a strong sea running. All hands bailing and pumping. At 6 A. M. we got steam into the starboard boiler and divided the hands into three watches, two hours below and four hours on deck. The ship was steaming with both boilers this day, during the latter part of which we had moderate weather. There was three feet of water in the engine-room.

Monday, Nov. 11—Moderate weather, with a strong sea. The ship began to make water, and in four hours had made eighteen inches, slacking out all fires and stopping the engines. All hands again commenced bailing out of stoke-hole and engine-room. At noon we had gained on the water. At 2 P. M. got the port fires lighted again, and 4 P. M. started the engine; but the motion made the ship make more water, which at 7 P. M. slacked out the fires again, and all hands took to pumping and bailing. The donkey would not work. At 8 P. M. we tried to uncouple the shaft from the engine, to make the ship steam, but failed, not having sufficient tools, and not being able to get into the tunnel to uncouple it aft on account of the foul air; we made an attempt to, but the fumes nearly smothered. At midnight we had moderate weather.

Tuesday, Nov. 12—Strong winds with a strong sea. All hands were pumping and bailing, but we found the water had gained three feet in the engine-room during the night, three feet in after-hold, and three feet in fore-hold. At daylight we commenced with all hands to throw cargo overboard to lighten the ship, and got two beef casks slung and commenced bailing with them, heaving them up by steam. In this way we could only just keep the water at the same depth. At 6 P. M. half the crew were bailing with casks.

Wednesday, Nov. 13—Strong southerly winds, with a strong sea. At daylight we found the water had gained eighteen inches in the engine-room during the night. In the after-hold there was five feet, in the fore-hold four feet, and the cross bunker-hold was full up to the beams. All hands were kept bailing with casks, and throwing cargo overboard. At 2 P. M. all hands came aft, and wanted to know what I was going to do, as they were fairly worn out and could not work any longer, having been ten days at hard work, and asked if I would not let them take to the boats. I told them a half-sunken ship was better than an open boat to starve to death in, as by a little exertion we could keep the ship from sinking until some one came to our relief. They would only resume work again on the condition that I should let them leave in the first vessel that came in sight. I, of course, had to submit. This was then had until last evening, when the argument was resumed. At a late hour no result had been reached.

THE RECENT GALES.

Numerous Disasters Reported in England, and Many Lives Lost.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Vessels arriving from sea report that the gale continues, but not with the severity of Saturday last. Several of the English seaport towns have been considerably damaged by the violence of the storm.

Reports of marine disasters are constantly coming to hand. The ship Loch Leven Flower, from Bordiansk, Russia, for Falmouth, was lost at sea, with all on board.

The ships Electric, Capt. Fayn, from New-York Oct. 24, for Hamburg, and Chance, from Pensacola, for Sunderland, have also been lost at sea. Their Captains and crews were rescued by the bark Holmestrand, from New-York, for Queenstown, and landed at the latter port.

The ship Royal Adelaide, which sailed from this city several days since for Sydney, N. S. W., was totally wrecked off Portland, and several passengers were drowned.

Eight Lives Lost from a Lake Propeller Ashore Near Collingwood, Ontario.

THORNBURY, Ontario, Nov. 26.—The propeller Mary Ward is still aground between Thornbury and Collingwood. Eight men were lost in endeavoring to get ashore in a small boat. Mr. Stephens, of Owen Sound, is reported among the drowned. Three fishing-boats left here last night and took off nine passengers safely—all who were on board.

SWEETSER.

The Times' Exposure of His Wrong-Doing—His Antecedents.

From the Buffalo Express, Nov. 25.

The NEW-YORK TIMES appears to have taken on itself the duty of bringing to light all the iniquities that occur in the management of corporate bodies, no matter how closely the interested parties may seek to cover them up. It has been wonderfully successful in exposing the Municipal corruption of the Metropolis, and in driving the perpetrators from power; and now the TIMES is seeking to win new glories by showing up rascality in the high places of railway companies. For some time it has been prodding the new Erie management with a very sharp stick. But its latest success has been won in forcing the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Company to make public the story of their General Superintendent's defalcation, rumors of which had leaked out, but which the directors seemed to be inclined to smother. In another column we reproduce from the TIMES of Saturday an official account of the Sweetser defalcation, which would probably never have seen the light in this shape but for the persistent efforts of that paper. The TIMES had previously published such versions of the affair as it had been able to gather from unofficial sources, giving at the same time an account of its fruitless attempts to ascertain the facts at head-quarters. The officers of the company were thus constrained to let the truth appear.

The Mr. Sweetser in question was formerly a resident of this city, where he has many friends still. He was a conductor on the Buffalo and Erie Railroad for several years, when R. N. Brown was the Superintendent. This was ten or twelve years ago. He resigned that place to accept a division superintendency on the Erie Railway. He was soon afterward appointed General Superintendent of the Atlantic and Great Western Railway, on the opening of that line, and was held in great confidence by Mr. James McHenry and the English party that then controlled its affairs. While holding this position Mr. Sweetser was supposed to have accumulated considerable wealth. He might very well have done so legitimately, as this was the time when the Pennsylvania oil region was first developed. The Atlantic and Great Western Road was contiguous to the territory, and largely interested in the oil traffic, and of course Mr. Sweetser's position gave him commanding opportunities to become interested in profitable tracts of oil and coal lands.

He left the service of the Atlantic and Great Western Company when the Vanderbilt party left the control of it. When they recently regained the control, one of their first acts was to reinstate Mr. Sweetser in his old position, which, it seems, he immediately undertook to turn to his own private account. It is quite possible that the case may be somewhat different from that presented in the TIMES, but the drawing will not be copy from the Times. We certainly hope so, and should be glad to give him the benefit of such a statement. It would be read with pleasure by his old friends in Buffalo.

Prize-Fighting in the East—A Buffalo and a Tiger in Combat.

A correspondent of the London Standard, writing from Hong Kong, on Oct. 12, describes one of the entertainments supplied by the Maharajah of Singapore to the Grand Duke Alexis, in honor of the visit of the latter to the island. He says: "After luncheon the party proceeded to witness a fight between a buffalo and a tiger. Those who had never seen a combat of this kind would have been inclined to bet freely on the latter; but the natives said that the chances were in favor of the buffalo, and, indeed, that the tiger was never known to win. The cage in which the tiger was kept for the fight was of an oval form, some fifty feet long by about twenty wide, in an enclosure of bamboo poles, fifteen feet high,

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The attendance at the Exchange yesterday, Tuesday, Nov. 22, was very large, among those present being nearly all the heavy real-estate operators of the City, drawn together by the advertised sale of the valuable property belonging to the estate of David Banks, deceased, sold by Meller, Wilkins & Co., under a Supreme Court decree in partition, Wm. Nan. Esq., referee. The property embraced forty-two parcels of improved and unimproved City realty, located on leading streets and avenues, all of which were disposed of at good figures, the aggregate of the sale reaching the sum of $709,650. The lots on Fortieth-street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, sold at from $15,900 to $22,100 each, the eighteen lots bringing together the sum of $350,200. The most valuable single piece of property disposed of was that located on the north-west corner of Bleecker and Wooster streets, for which the sum of $47,000 was realized. Bidding throughout the sale was active, and the greatest interest was manifested from the opening to the close of the transaction. But comparatively little of the property was purchased by the heirs. Full details, with names of purchasers, are appended. The result of the auction will have a good effect upon the market, proving as it does that when really first-class real estate is offered at auction on reasonable terms, success will mark the effort. The sale is the most important that has been held this season, and the general business of the day the largest for months. Messrs. Muller & Co. also sold, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, Wm. H. Hart, Esq., referee, a four-story brick store, tenement, and lot—latter 17ft by 100—situate on the east side of Third-avenue, 123.10 feet south of One Hundred and Eighth-street, for $12,000. Purchaser, Jonas Sonneborn.

In addition to the above, the following other sales were made by other auctioneers. By James M. Miller, at a Supreme Court sale in foreclosure, Charles A. Jackson, Esq., referee, a five-story French-flat brown-stone-front house and lot—latter 24 by 64.10—situate on the south-west corner of Lexington-avenue and Forty-first-street, sold for $22,500, and purchased by John S. Young, plaintiff in the legal action. By Wm. Kennelly, by order of the Court of Common Pleas, in foreclose, W. McDaniel, Esq., referee, the premises known as No. 113 Ridge-street, east side, 125 feet north of Stanton-street, embracing a lot 25 by 100, with a five-story brick tenement-house upon the front thereof, and a four-story brick tenement in rear, sold for $21,800, and purchased by Mary C. Brodick, executrix and plaintiff in the foreclosure suit. By E. H. Ludlow & Co., at a Supreme Court sale, George P. Smith, Esq., referee, the premises known as No. 253 East Seventy-eighth-street, north side, 162.10 feet west of Second-avenue, comprising a lot 13.10 by 102.2, with a three-story and basement brick house thereon, renting for about $800 per year; sold for $6,100, to Eleanor Goldsmith, the holder of a second mortgage on the property. By Hugh N. Camp, at an administrator's sale, by order of Hon. Robert C. Hutchings, Surrogate, the four-story high-stoop brown-stone-front house and lot known as No. 43 West Seventeenth-street, north side, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, sold for $20,000, to J. C. Treacy. No other sales were made.

The remaining proposed auctions of the day were disposed of as follows: Leral sale by B. P. Fairchild, of property on East Twelfth and East Thirteenth streets, 62.3 feet east of Avenue C, adjourned to Dec. 3; Sheriff's sale, by Wm. Kennelly, of house and lot on West Thirty-eighth-street, 168.6 feet east of Tenth-avenue, adjourned to same date, and legal sale, by Joseph McGuire, of tenement property on Delancey-street, 25 feet west of Pitt-street, adjourned to Dec. 10. The property located at Bay Ridge, Long Island, offered at public auction by E. H. Ludlow & Co. was withdrawn upon a bid of $8,000, and the house and lot No. 621 Baltic-street, Brooklyn, between Fourth and Fifth avenues, offered by Heberton & Carroll, was also withdrawn, upon bids amounting to $4,200. In regard to the sale of lots in Jersey City yesterday, by J. M. Gibson, particulars, if a report is received, will be given to-morrow.

For today, at the Exchange, the following auctions are announced, at which City real estate will be sold, viz.: By Muller, Wilkins & Co., at a foreclosure sale, by order of the Court of Common Pleas, A. G. Vanderpoel, Esq., referee, four houses and lots on the east side of Madison-avenue, 39.11 feet north of One Hundred and Thirty-second-street, lots each 20 by 80. Also, at public auction, the four-story brick house and lot (latter 25 by 43.9) No. 27 Essex-street, west side, 50 feet north of Hester-street, and the four-story and basement brick house and lot, latter 22 by 55, No. 32 Norfolk-street, east side 25.3 feet south of Essex-street. By E. H. Ludlow & Co., at a Supreme Court sale, Henry Nicoll, Esq., referee, a house and lot on the east side of Madison-avenue, 82.2 feet north of Seventy-ninth-street, lot 20 by 77.

At private sale, Lewis Sohn, No. 335 Broadway, reports having recently disposed of the following City property: One four-story high-stoop brown-stone-front house and lot on the south side of East Sixtieth-street, 175 feet east of Madison-avenue, 22 by 65 by 100, sold for $41 000; one three-story high-stoop brown-stone front house and lot on the south side of East Sixty-second-street, 425 feet east of Fourth-avenue, 16 by 50 by 80, sold for $17,500, and five full lots on the north side of One Hundred and Fourteenth-street, 130 feet from Fourth-avenue, sold together for $20,000.

William Tucker, No. 220 Fifth-avenue, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-seventh streets, also reports having recently sold, at private sale, the following dwellings: No. 44 East Twenty-first-street, 25 by 60 by 100, for $36,100; No. 28 East Twenty-third-street, 25 by 65 by 100, for $71,25; No. 203 West Thirty-eighth-street, 23 by 55 by 80, for $26,900; No. 142 East Thirty-fifth-street, 17 by 50 by 100, for $20,200; No. 204 East Fifteenth-street, 16.8 by 45 by 100, for $12,000; No. 37 West Forty-ninth-street, 23 by 60 by 100, for $40,000; West Forty-fourth street, between Broadway and Eighth-avenue, house and lot, 20 by 50 by 100, Astor lease, for $16,000.

THE MISSING KENTUCKIAN.

His Flight with Appropriated Funds Fully Established.

One of His Business Friends Driven into Bankruptcy and His Relatives Fleeced—A Missing Man Accounted For.

On Sunday last, the TIMES published exclusively a new and startling theory in regard to the mysterious disappearance of Mr. Geo. N. Peay, of Louisville, in which it was stated, on the authority of Detective Tilly, of the Central office, that the missing Kentuckian was a voluntary absentee, and had probably taken his departure for some South American port. This theory, which was disbelieved by the missing man's friends, received yesterday confirmation through the agency of Detective Bligh, of the Louisville police force. Mr. Bligh had come to this City to advise with the New-York Police authorities in regard to the search for his missing friend, and, after going over the whole ground, became convinced that the TIMES theory in regard to his disappearance was the probably correct one. Yesterday Mr. Bligh received a dispatch from Louisville containing information which tends strongly to confirm that view of the case.

It appears that a Mr. H. H. Neal, a clothing merchant, on Fourth-street, Louisville, Ky., became bankrupt, and, as he owed a considerable amount of money in this City, some of his friends combined to help him. Among these men were Messrs. Davidson, Ryan, and George C. Buchanan, of Louisville, and Davidson came on to this City to effect a settlement with the creditors, and succeeded in obtaining their consent to take fifty cents on the dollar of the amounts due them. He wrote on to Mr. Ryan to send to each of the creditors of Mr. Neal a check for the amount of their respective claims. In the meantime, Mr. Peay, who had appeared to take great interest in the matter, went to Mr. Ryan and said that, as he was going on to New-York, he would see what he could do to settle the matter satisfactorily. Mr. Ryan, having the utmost confidence in Mr. Peay, assented to this arrangement. Mr. Davidson left New-York the same day that Mr. Peay arrived. The latter called on Mr. Van Ingen, a cloth merchant, at the corner of Broome-street and Broadway, and said he had been deputed to settle Mr. Neal's business difficulties. He was informed that Mr. Davidson had already settled the matter, as stated above. The Louisville merchants, having perfect faith in Mr. Peay, sent him the checks with which to settle Mr. Neal's debts. These checks were subsequently returned to Mr. Ryan, with the request that a draft for the whole amount, $4,700, should be sent him in his own name, as he thought he could secure a better settlement. Not having any reason to doubt the sincerity of Peay, the draft was sent to him. Instead of having it cashed by application to merchants in this city, with whom he was acquainted, Peay obtained the money from a Mr. Courtney, in Brooklyn, a relative of his wife, and then disappeared, without having attempted to pay the money to those for whom it was intended. When Mr. Courtney presented the draft to the bank on which it was drawn, payment was refused, as the parties in Louisville, having become suspicious of the delay, had telegraphed on to stop the draft. A day or two ago, Detective Bligh, who had come to this City in the interest of Mr. Buchanan, who had been chiefly instrumental in furnishing the money for Mr. Neal, telegraphed on his suspicions that Peay had absconded with the money, and requesting that a bank book to contain $25 000 in cash, bonds, and other securities of Mr. Peay, which he had deposited with a banking-house in Louisville, should be opened and examined. Mr. Buchanan proceeded to attach Mr. Peay's property, and obtained an order from the Court to open and examine the contents of the box. This was accordingly done, and the receptacle was found to contain nothing but an old account-book. As Mr. Peay was the only person who had a key to this box, it is fair to presume that its former contents are in his possession. This has confirmed the former impression of the detectives that Peay has absconded with the money, and his friends and acquaintances in this City are reluctantly accepting this view of the matter.

The Louisville Commercial of the 24th inst. contains the following in relation to the matter:

On Friday, Mr. George C. Buchanan, who was the custodian of the funds upon the person of George N. Peay, who is supposed to have been murdered in New-York last week, proceeded to attach the property of Mr. Peay in this city. Mr. Buchanan has responsibilities to certain parties for the funds, and deemed it wisest to take this step.

The party in whose interest Mr. Peay went to New-York was Mr. H. H. Neal, the clothing merchant on Fourth-street. His creditors were about to force him into bankruptcy, and several of his friends agreed to raise an amount sufficient to enable him to pay fifty cents on the dollar of his indebtedness. This was done, and when Mr. Peay arrived in New-York, Mr. Ryan, of this City, met him and handed him several checks filled up with the different amounts due the parties in New-York and Peay, thinking that he could make a better settlement, asked Mr. Ryan to send the checks back to Louisville, and have one draft sent for the whole amount, that he might work with the creditors himself. This was done, and the draft for $4,700 was received by Mr. Peay, as we have stated.

Through the disappearance of Mr. Peay, Mr. Neal is thrown into bankruptcy. The question has been repeatedly asked, why Mr. Peay did not disburse the money on Wednesday, the day he received it. It is very evident that the delay in securing identification made it so late when Mr. Peay arrived in New-York from Brooklyn that it was impossible to transact the business, and he deferred it until Thursday morning. Nothing reliable has been heard since our statement of yesterday morning. Detective Bligh went to New-York on Friday night, and Messrs. Speed Peay and Laf. Joseph will return to Louisville to-morrow.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

Twentieth Annual Meeting of the Organization—Reports, and Election of Officers.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held, yesterday, in the Directors' room of the Metropolitan National Bank, Mr. Wm. A. Booth, presiding. Messrs. Wm. A. Booth, G. Cabot Ward, Robert J. Livingstone, D. Willis James, and Charles L. Brace were elected trustees. The report of the Treasurer was presented, and was replete with interesting statistics. It showed a balance on hand, Nov. 1, of $2,686 44; receipts from all sources, $201,772 95. Total, $204,459 39. Expenditures for twenty-one day and fifteen evening industrial schools, employing seventy-two teachers, $60 939 50; for payments on account of special charities, Newsboys' Lodging-house and the Ward Lodging-houses, general repairs to the same, and salaries of teachers, including the Western Emigration account, $159 064 71; bills payable, last year's debt, $27,000; temporarily borrowed, in 1872, $15,000; balance on hand Nov. 1, $3,394 68, making a total of $204 459 39.

The building fund of the Newsboys' Lodging-house was reported last year as amounting to $75,000. Since then, the International Hotel lot and building have been bought and paid for, at a cost of $65,000, and the building has been taken down. A contract has been entered into for the erection there of a Newsboys' Lodging-house, at an expense of about $90,000.

There are on the rolls of the schools 9,517 scholars, and the average attendance is 2,884. The savings bank in the Newsboys' Lodging-house has been used by 1,029 boys, who have saved $2,644 43, being an increase over last year.

During the year 843 boys have been placed in good homes; 723 lost and truant boys, (an average of two a day,) have been restored to friends and relatives. The average of lodgers has been 180 boys nightly. During the year 57,740 meals, and 57,661 lodgings have been furnished. Since the establishment of the institution nearly 8,000 boys have been provided with permanent homes and employment.

The matron of the Girls' Lodging-house asks for suitable amusement for them, and makes the following exhibit:

Number of lodgers	1,535
Number of lodgings furnished	11,175
Number of lodgings paid for	4,558
Number of meals furnished	24,647
Number of meals paid for	8,488
Number of girls sent to situations	275
Number of girls found employment	40
Number of girls sent to friends	87
Number of girls sent to other institutions	7
Number of girls sent to the West	35
Number of girls who learned to operate the sewing machine	1,417
Number of girls who found employment	127

Receipts and Expenses.

Expenses	$5,323 55
Receipts	1,2o7 11
Net cost	$4,016 44

From the different Ward lodging-houses the reports are most gratifying. The volume of emigration is something larger this year than last, say 3,462 against 3,386 last year, a gain of 76, and making a grand total since 1856 of 28,677. This embraces, however, not only all sent to Western and North-western States, but also those sent to New-England and neighboring States.

The Secretary's report gives an idea of the work accomplished during the past twenty years by the Children's Aid Society. It says:

"It is twenty years since this work, 'To aid the children of the poor in New-York City,' began amid many discouragements and with few friends. Our whole force consisted then of the writer and an office boy, opening the enterprise in a small office on the corner of Amity-street and Broadway. We placed in homes during the first year some 200 homeless boys and girls, and our first industrial school (in Roosevelt-street) contained some hundred pupils. In the second year, we opened the first lodging-house for Newsboys' in a loft of the old 'Sun Building,' where we sheltered some twenty lads each night. Our whole outlays the first year were $4,191. This year we employ seventy-two teachers, besides some twenty other agents. We reach some 9,000 poor children with our twenty one 'Industrial Schools' and fifteen night schools, and some 2,000 homeless boys and girls with our five lodging-houses, sheltering and instructing an average of 400 every night in addition, we provide with homes some 3 000 children; while our outlays have risen to $159,064."

Incorporated in the Secretary's report is a relation by Mr. C. R. Fry, the Society's emigration agent in the West, of many interesting incidents that come daily under his observation.

After the reading of these reports the Society adjourned, and the Trustees held a meeting for the election of officers, with the following result: Wm. A. Booth, President; J. E. Williams, Treasurer, and C. L. Brace, Secretary.

THANKSGIVING DELICACIES.

A Glimpse at the Markets and Their Contents—The Price Lists and the Patrons.

The approach of Thanksgiving draws attention to the good things displayed at the markets, and fowls become the objects of admiration. The various markets yesterday were crowded with purchasers laying in a stock of Thanksgiving rarities.

Washington Market was not devoid of interest yesterday. The approaches thereto were barricaded with fruits and vegetables in inviting array. Crowds of people from all points were crowding into the place. On the sidewalks flanking the market poultry was displayed in excess.

For days past the railroad-cars of the various in-bound trains have been loaded with poultry and game of every variety. The aggregate weight would be an extremely difficult matter to determine. The dealers have been busy of late. Circulars and agents were dispatched to all parts of the West and South for shipments of poultry, and for days past it has been arriving great quantities.

In Washington Market the best fowl is considered to be that received from Philadelphia. Large quantities of excellent quality come also from New-York State, and a vast deal from Ohio and other Western States. The largest supply of game is brought from Illinois and Iowa and over the Pacific Railroad. California sends quail.

The rumors of a serious disease among poultry has somewhat injured the business. Prices were necessarily lowered in consequence, and there is an extremely slow sale for chickens.

The interior of the markets presented a festive appearance yesterday, and every one known to market-men was used by poulterers to tempt the visitor by the skillful display of his wares. Around the stands a network is formed of quail, grouse, canvas-back ducks, rabbits, deer, mammoth turkies, ducks, chickens, and fat geese. The price list is thus given: Turkeys, from 18 to 20 cents per pound; ducks, 20 to 25; geese, 16 to 20; chickens, 16 to 25. Rabbits were offered at 50 and 65 cents a pair; wild ducks, broad bills, 75 cents to $1; black ducks, $1 to $1 25; canvas-back ducks, $3 to $3 25 a pair; prairie hens, $1 50 to $1 62½; partridges, $1 50 to $1 75; quail, $2 50 to $3 per dozen. A large "Philadelphia turkey," weighing about fourteen pounds, it was ascertained, could be bought for $4; a medium size, eight pounds, $2; a small turkey, four pounds, $1. One of the largest chickens, weighing six pounds, cost $1 50, and one of the smallest, three pounds, 75 cents. These samples were assured to be "prime articles, the best in the market."

Prime cuts of rib beef for roasting, 25c.; rounds of beef, 16c.; cross ribs, 16c.; chuck ribs, 16c. to 20c.; porter-house steak, 30c. to 35c.; round steak, 20c. to 22c.; sirloin steak, 20c. to 22c.; kidneys, 20c. each; liver, 10c. to 12c.; corned beef, mess rump, 16c.; corned beef, round, 16c.; and other cuts, 8c. to 10c.

For pork loins for roasting, 10c.; hams, 16c. to 17c.; pig, 14c. to 15c.; sucking pig, 20c.

Mutton for roasting, 9c. per pound; leg of mutton to boil, with caper sauce, 15c.; chops, 18c.

Among other delicacies venison was found to be worth 30 cents per pound, tripe 10 cents, and a sam-bone of beef, for soup, 50 cents.

A fish-dealer gave a schedule of his prices as follows: Codfish, 5 cents per pound; haddock, 6; lobsters, 8 to 10; scollops, 40 cents per quart; bluefish, 10 cents per pound; mackerel, 15; smelts, 25; flounders, 10; halibut, 20; perch, 12 to 20; striped bass, 25; white fish and pickerel, 18 to 20; salmon, 45 to 50, and pan-fish 10 cents.

The market has seldom been more crowded than it was yesterday, and everybody, buyers and sellers, seemed intent upon making the best bargains.

A market-man stated to the TIMES reporter that though there was no truth in the chicken epidemic story, there was much bad poultry received from distant points. The dishonest hucksters keep this poultry packed in saltpetre, and wash it before exposure for sale, in alum water, which cleans it of slime and gives it a dry and fresh-looking appearance.

Fulton and Catherine Markets did not present, yesterday, as busy an appearance as Washington, but the poultry-dealers kept open stands, and were surrounded by buyers. Today the Brooklynites will throng these markets and lay in the necessary supplies for a feast to-morrow.

The up-town markets, Tompkins, J Herson, Manhattan, &c., did a brisk business in poultry, yesterday, and are prepared for an increased trade today. Agents of various charitable institutions have been visiting the market-men, and have been, as is the annual custom, liberally supplied with poultry for their charges.

Another Arrest in the Woodhull and Claflin Case—Mr. Challis' Newest Complaint.

James E. Maxwell, of No. 250 West Twenty-third-street, was yesterday arrested on a charge of perjury preferred by Luther C. Challis, the complainant in the suits for libel against Woodhull and Claflin and Col. Blood.

The complaint of Mr. Challis, which is very voluminous, states that Maxwell, after being sworn to tell the truth, perjured himself in the relation of conversation alleged to have been had with Challis.

Appended to the complaint is the affidavit of H. L. Tracy, one of the clerks of the Hoffman House, substantiating Challis' allegations.

Justice Leowith fixed bail at $3,000, which was furnished by George T. Forrest, of No. 58 West Twenty-third-street. It is stated that Maxwell is under a bond of $40 000 not to leave New-York City during the progress of a bankruptcy case now pending.

Stanley and the Geographical Society.

The large hall of the Cooper Union was well filled, last evening, for the purpose of participating in the reception of Henry M. Stanley by the American Geographical Society. Much to the surprise of those present the guest of the evening did not appear. Judge C. P. Daly read a letter to the audience from Mr. Stanley, in which the writer pleaded indisposition as an excuse for his non-appearance. Mr. W. S. Stearns and Mr. John Livingstone made brief addresses, and the meeting dispersed.
